CZ $125M Plan 'Act of Faith'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. chairman Robert Rogers today announced a $125 million spending program as "an act of faith" in the future of British Columbia.

The two-year program — the largest in the company's history — includes $75 million for expansion and $50 million for an accelerated maintenance schedule.

Rogers said funds must be spent if the company is to protect and expand jobs in the province and despite the present weak market conditions.

A large portion of the expansion will take place on Vancouver island.

The major items:

—There will be a $26.6 million addition to the Elk Falls pulp and paper mill complex at Campbell River to increase production of thermomechanical pulp. In addition, $1.5 million will be spent for newsprint machine equipment at the mill.

—An additional $17.8 million will be spent to construct a high-speed, small log sawmill and planer mill at Elk Falls to replace the present one which is obsolete.

—A total of $9.4 million will be spent to impove log sorting and log transportation on Vancouver Island and other coastal operations. The figure includes $2.5 million for a new tug.

—The company will construct a $16.3 million plywood veneer plant and will improve the existing plywood plant at the Fraser Mills wood products complex in Coquitlam.

—In the Interior, $775,000 will be spent for new production machinery at the company's Armstrong sawmill and plywood mill.

Work will start on all projects in 1977 and should be completed by late 1978.

In addition, the company will spend a further $50 million over the next two years in an accelerated maintenance program. Normally, about $15 million to $20 million per year is the limit of maintenance spending.

Rogers said the program will be financed through internally-generated funds in the early stages with some borrowing later in the program.

Rogers said the program would not result in any immediate increase in jobs (except for construction) but production would be expanded.

Company production of baled pulp will rise to an average of 570 tons from 530 tons. Newsprint production will rise to 750 tons per day from 700 tons.

Lumber production at Campbell River will rise to 100 million board feet from 70 million. Plywood production at Fraser Mills will be increased to 125 million square feet from 100 million.

In addition, 110 million square feet of new plywood production will be added at Fraser Mills.

The company will be spending $4 million to improve air quality standards at the Elk Falls mill.

Rogers said there will be a reduction of water debris by the new program of transporting logs by barge rather than in rafts. Crown Zellerbach would be the first company to change to a system of moving all logs by barge, he said.

Last expansion program by the company was $25 milllion in spending which was completed in 1974.

MAIL TALKS CONTINUING

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiators for the post office and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers expected to meet all day today as they continued attempts to work out their dispute over technological change in the post office.

PRICES UP ONLY 5.6%

Rate of Inflation At Four-Year Low

OTTAWA (CP) — Lower food prices in November produced the smallest annual increase in the cost of living in nearly four years, Statistics Canada said today.

The consumer price index—the most widely used measure of inflation—rose only 5.6 per cent in the 12 months to November. The last time there was a smaller annual increase for the monthly index was in December, 1972, when it rose by 5.1 per cent.

Statistics Canada said the continuing moderation in consumer prices last month once again was entirely attributable to food prices. Excluding food, the index rose at an annual rate of 8.6 per cent.

Pork prices were down on average by nine per cent in November from October levels, and fresh fruit prices also declined. These were only partly offset by higher prices for fresh vegetables, milk, soft drinks and restaurant meals.

In a review of the economy presented Tuesday to provincial finance ministers, federal Finance Minister Donald Macdonald conceded that the slowing of the inflation rate this year has been due almost entirely to food prices. He warned that Canadians cannot expect to continue benefitting from lower food prices.

Macdonald warned that primary producers of food, who are not subject to price controls, now need higher prices in order to assure a steady supply.

He predicted "a probable turnaround" in food prices together with a new round of oil price increases and the impact of a devalued Canadian dollar will all contribute to higher inflation in the months ahead.

The result will be a mixed pattern of acceleration and deceleration in the rate of increase for consumer prices over the next few months, he said.

Despite the generally lower inflation rate last month, the purchasing power of the dollar remains weak. A 1971 dollar was worth only 66 cents in November.

The over-all index in November stood at 152.2, up from 151.7 in October. On a 1971 base of 100, the index was at 14.1 in November, 1975.

PENSIONS UP 8.2% JAN. 1

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada Pension Plan retirement, disability and survivors' benefits will rise by 8.2 per cent Jan. 1, the health and welfare department announced today.

The increases mean that retirement benefits will go to a maximum of $173.61 a month and disability benefits will rise to a maximum $175.05 monthly.

Maximum surviving spouses' benefits will go to $104.17 a month for those 65 and older and $109.94 for those under 65.

Benefits to children of disabled contributors and orphans of deceased contributors will go to a maximum $44.84 a month.

Quake Topples Building

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A mild earthquake rocked a gold mining town southwest of here today killing at least one miner and bringing a four-storey block of apartments crashing to the ground.

The tremor at Welkom, 175 miles southwest of Johannesburg, lasted nearly two minutes, according to witnesses, and measured 4.8 on the open ended Richter Scale which classified it as mild.

Gold mine elevators were jammed in shafts and scores of windows shattered onto cracked sidewalks. Civic officials feared more deaths would be reported as rubble clearing proceeded.

"Suddenly the ground was moving violently, cars were bouncing around and people rushed into the streets to escape falling plaster and walls," one office worker said. "Many people were trapped inside because doors would not open."

"There's just rubble," said Mrs. Colleen Futter, manager of a local air charter company, after she drove past the destroyed Tempest HOF block of apartments. The building disintegrated about two hours after the tremor.

"There were masses of people around, earth moving equipment, police and ambulances," said Mrs. Futter.

The quake occurred at 10:38 a.m. government geological survey officials said in Pretoria.

Telephone communications to the dusty but neatly laid out town, which is South Africa's biggest gold source, were partially cut.

AVIS PAYOFFS DENIED BY LANG

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang said Tuesday he is confident no one in his department accepted improper payments from the Avis car rental agency.

And he accused Conservative transport critic Jack Horner (Crowfoot) of making "totally unfair" statements in suggesting that he or his officials might have taken such payments.

Horner told the Commons that Avis auditors recently found that the company paid $425,000 since Jan. 1, 1972, to "consultants, local government officials and others."

He asked the transport minister whether any of the $425,000 "found its way into his department or to himself."

Lang replied: "I know of no such matters and am confident none have occurred."

Later, Horner told reporters that he felt it was his duty to raise the issue in case it was related to a recent controversy over car rental locations at Canadian airports.

He said he learned of the payments from an American newspaper clipping sent to him anonymously.

UVic Wing Gets Go-Ahead

The music wing at the University of Victoria has been given the go-ahead after all.

Reversing an earlier decision not to approve funds for the facility, the Universities Council of B.C. has written to Education Minister Pat McGeer recommending the wing be given top priority.

Funds for the $3.2 million extension to the MacLaurin building will be borrowed through the B.C. Education Capital Financing Authority subject to McGeer's approval.

UCBC financial adviser Ted Affleck said he is not certain what the current borrowing power was, so he could not hazard a guess when construction would begin.

"But it's been designated top priority," he said today.

In early October, the UCBC announced the construction grant disbursements for B.C.'s three universities, and the music wing was not included although it had at one time been approved by the provincial government.

UVic president Howard Petch, board of governors chairman Joe Cunliffe and board member Ian Stewart made a personal appeal to the council in Vancouver Nov. 16, asking it to reconsider the decision.

The council wrote to McGeer Monday recommending approval.

Caron Quit On His Own

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Press reported erroneously in various news stories Nov. 23, 24 and 25 that H. Marcel Caron of Montreal had been dropped or removed as a director of the Crown corporation, Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.

In fact, Caron resigned as a director on his own volition in September, 1976.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie told the Commons committee on natural resources and public works Nov. 23 that Caron had come to him "on his own volition" to report concern "not about a conflict of interest, but . . . the appearance of a conflict of interest" because Caron's firm of Clarkson, Gordon and Co. Ltd. was the auditor of customers of AECL.

The Canadian Press regrets its error and apologizes for any embarrassment or inconvenience caused Caron.

ALL DOLLED UP ON WAY TO WORK

BOSTON (UPI) — State policeman Frank Baran said the blonde with the turned-up nose was "a real doll."

Baran became suspicious Tuesday because the blonde he saw every morning riding in a car with two men had been wearing the same clothes for a month. "Besides, she never smiled," he said.

The trooper pulled the car over and discovered the blonde was a mannequin. The driver got a summons for failure to obey a highway sign restricting morning travel in the commuter lane of Interstate 93 to cars with three or more passengers.

Fishing Union Probe Called Off by Gov't

VANCOUVER (CP) — An anti-combines investigation into the affairs of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union has been cancelled indefinitely, Frank Roseman, restrictive trades practices commissioner, announced today.

The decision follows two days of demonstrations and disruptions by fishermen of the hearings.

Fishermen refused orders from the investigators to be examined in private. Monday a crowd of them jammed an office in the downtown MacMillan Bloedel building, forcing Roseman to abandon the hearing.

Tuesday a group of about 15 fishermen entered the consumer and corporate affairs office in the Pacific Centre where the investigation had been transferred and scuffles broke out with staff members trying to keep them out of the hearing room.

Again the hearings were postponed.

Roseman said today he didn't know if they would be resumed but he said it couldn't "be concluded that they will be dropped."

The decision to abandon the proceedings came from Robert Bertrand of Ottawa, the director of investigations and research with the restricted trades practices commission.

Fishermen who thronged the abortive hearings protested that the hearings should be held in public.

George Hewison, UFAWU business agent, said the federal government was conducting a "star chamber" hearing into the union's business and said the fishermen had nothing to hide.

The union's offices were raided in November, 1975, and thousands of documents were

Iona Threatens To Quit Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP)—Sport Minister Iona Campagnolo said Tuesday she is prepared to resign her cabinet seat if ferry service in northern B.C. is not improved.

However, she expressed confidence in an interview that Transport Minister Otto Lang appreciates the difficulties facing northern British Columbians and better service will be provided.

Mrs. Campagnolo said she told a meeting in her hometown of Prince Rupert that if she was unable to "bring the seriousness of the situation facing my consitutents to the attention of the government," then she had no "real recourse but to resign."

She said Tuesday that "being a cabinet minister doesn't mean a hill of beans to me" if she is unable to look after the residents of her riding of Skeena.

Mrs. Campagnolo's threat to resign was mentioned in the Commons Tuesday by Benno Friesen (PC—Surrey-White Rock).

A Place in Her Heart

It's inevitable that as someone with the compassion of Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova travels around the world, some poverty-stricken countries become especially dear to her.

To the executive director of the Unitarian Services Committee, Lesotho is one such country.

Lesotho is one of those emerging black African countries that few Westerners appear to know anything about.

But Dr. Lotta does — especially its hungry children — in particular, the herd boys.

They have very little future, unless they can be educated, and Dr. Lotta has organized a USC scholarship fund — one of the most successful contributions to Lesotho.

A contribution from you may go to a young herd boy's schooling or another important USC project in Lesotho.

During her most recent visit to that country, Dr. Lotta made notes on her observations of the lonely herd boys:

"Often they are tiny boys, clad in a torn blanket with little else to protect them from the driving winds and the snow in wintertime. Their stomachs are bloated from undernourishment and worms."

Most children attend school only every second or third day or don't even enter primary school until their teens because of their duties.

One scholarship recipient is Stephen Sefako. Stephen did not enter primary school until he was 16. Now 22, Stephen is in his second to last year of high school and leading his class.

Thanks to USC, his schooling is assured, and he wants to continue on to study medicine. Doctors are badly needed in Lesotho.

The USC scholarship fund costs $200 per student. The Lesotho government underwrites all university costs provided the student has earned a first or second class pass.

Dr. Lotta says she is confident all her students will qualify for that privilege.

The people of Greater Victoria last year donated $23,920 to the local USC appeal sponsored by The Times.

This year, the goal is $30,000 and contributions can be mailed in care of the Victoria Times, P.O. Box 300, Victoria, brought to the business office counter at 2621 Douglas or will be accepted by any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Cheques should be made payable to the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

BNA Out Of Talks

OTTAWA — Negotiations on the Constitution have been dropped from the agenda of a conference next week between Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers, the first such session to be attended by newly-elected Premier Rene Levesque of Quebec.

Trudeau also told the Commons Tuesday that the meeting next Monday and Tuesday will be closed to public and press.

Both decisions are based on requests from at least some of the premiers, Trudeau said.

A spokesman in his office said later that the decision to postpone discussion on constitutional reform — original purpose of the conference — came about because "a small number of the provinces, including Quebec, were definitely not in favor" of including the constitution.

Instead, the conference will deal with the state of the economy and tax and spending powers, issues on which federal and provincial finance ministers failed to agree at a conference that ended Tuesday.

The spokesman declined to say which premiers besides Quebec opposed constitutional discussions.

The dispute dates back to federal tax reform in 1971-72 when provinces were deeply concerned that federal measures would erode the provincial tax base.

To appease them the federal government promised that for a period of five years it would "guarantee" their revenue-paying the difference between what the new system produced and the old system would have produced.

The annual payments have grown from $83 million the first year to $900 million this year.

The federal government now claims the provinces have had sufficient time to increase their own taxes to make up the difference.

The provinces maintain they should continue to be compensated for the federal raid on their tax base back in 1971-72.

On the issue of revenue-sharing, it is likely that the premiers' conference will wind up just as stalemated as the just-concluded finance ministers' meeting.

That will put the federal government in the position of imposing its own solution unilaterally — a move that will fuel an already blazing feud over finances.

Tuesday's session of the finance ministers' conference produced intense disagreement — both on the question of revenue sharing and on proposed revisions to the Bank Act.

The disagreement was enforced by the fact provinces were, for the first time in history, united behind a single provincial proposal; and by the presence for the first time at a federal-provincial conference of representatives of the separatist Parti Quebecois government.

They have asked for the transfer to the provinces of four points of personal income tax.

The federal government refuses on the grounds that it has to maintain fiscal power in order to introduce new programs, or perhaps even reduce federal taxes.

Federal Finance Minister Donald Macdonald insisted there has been some accomplishments at the conference.

There had been general agreement on the principle of shifting away from shared-cost programs as in Medicare and Hospital Insurance, where one government collects the taxes and pays half the costs but another spends the money, he said.

On the revenue guarantee Macdonald said the federal government would not agree to the transfer of four tax points to the provinces because "it would give us less scope for other programs."

He indicated the federal government might be willing to accept a compromise but said four tax points was the "absolute minimum" the provinces would accept.

He was not overly impressed by the provincial consensus.

"When you are the federal minister everybody around the table timbers up on you. They try to put the black hat on the federal goverfnment," he said.

The consensus had been easy because they had made the demand high enough that every province gained, he added.

means a basket of consumer items that cost $100 in 1971 had risen to $152.20 last month. The same items cost $151.70 in October and $144.10 in November a year ago.

The Anti-Inflation Board, reacting to the figures on food prices, noted that although food prices at the farm are not under controls, board guides apply to some 250 major food processing and distributing firms.

"It is also noteworthy that, as shown in a study by the U.S. department of agriculture, Canada was the only one of 15 selected countries whose food price index in September was lower than the year-earlier level," the board said in a settlement.

The board welcomed "the moderate rise of 0.5 per cent between October and November" for prices of all items excluding food.

The board warned that "the year-to-year rise of only 5.6 per cent . . . should not lead to over-optimism about next year's price performance. The board's target of holding the year-to-year inflation rate to six per cent by October 1977—end of the program's second year — can be achieved, but not without continued effort."

Meanwhile in the Commons Tuesday, opposition members called for tax cuts to speed up the economy and provide jobs for the unemployed.

Prime Minister Trudeau said suggestions for such tax cuts would be transmitted to Finance Minster Macdonald.

Official opposition finance critic Sinclair Stevens (PC-York Simcoe) said that the new unemployment figures issued Tuesday revealed that the five eastern provinces each had unemployment rates higher than any state in the United States.

seized by commission investigators.

Roseman has refused all comment on why the hearings were called or what the commission hoped to find.

Roseman said in an interview today that normally unions and fishermen are exempt from the provision of the Combines Investigation Act.

While he remained silent on the reasons for the investigation, he did say that "obviously the director (Bertrand) has to believe the union's actions go beyond the exemptions allowed in the act."

He said there also seemed to be some misapprehension about his role in the proceedings and the way the commission operates.

"I'm only here as a referee. To make sure the questions put to the witnesses are fair and impartial," he said.

Rogers said the B.C. coastal forest industry needs a wholesale modernization and retooling if it is going to continue to compete in world markets.

Studies by the company show that trees now coming from coastal operations are changing from easy-to-reach fir giants of the valley bottoms to the mountainside hemlock and balsam in smaller sizes.

"The problem is that coast facilities were built to handle the big fir trees but not the large volumes of smaller hemlock and balsam that are coming out of the woods now and will increase in the years ahead," he said.

The Elk Falls mill will be designed to accommodate further expansion. The new small log sawmill at Elk Falls also will be capable of further expansion as markets improve.

IWA Head Lashes Out At Knudsen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Syd Thompson, president of the Vancouver and District Labor Council, lashed out Tuesday at new Macmillan Bloedel president Calvert Knudsen for his recent statements about layoffs at company operations.

"This Yankee has to be told that B.C. is not a banana republic ,that it is not the deep south and even under a Social Credit government people still come before profits," said Thompson, who is also president of the Vancouver local of the International Woodworkers of America.

He said Knudsen's hint of permanent closures in the forest industry if labor demands are not more reasonable will result in a "donnybrook" when ext year's contract comes up for negotiation.

"These statements lead to confrontations and have all the earmarks of a difficult set of negotiations in the forest industry next year."

Thompson said that if Knudsen's comments are the opening shot in contra-negotiations the IWA will accept the challenge.

the weather

A disturbance extending from the Pacific across Vancouver Island and northeastward into the B.C. Interior early this morning will move through the southern coast this afternoon and the Interior tonight.

Rain associated with the system along the coast and mixed rain and snow over the Interior will move to the south of B.C. with the disturbance. As a ridge of high pressure builds over B.C. behind the disturbance some clearing is anticipated particularly along the coast. Colder air will however sag into the central Interior to maintain a few snowflurries.

U.S. Silver Coins Roll Off the Victoria Scene

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The American quarter has just about disappeared in Victoria and the U.S. nickel and dime may not be far behind.

The drop in value of the Canadian dollar makes the U.S. quarter worth about 26 cents. Victoria stores have stopped buying U.S. coin and bringing it back to the city.

Bank managers say they have not yet started to drain off American coins but they will if the dollar falls about two cents more.

Meanwhile, customers have simply stopped coming in with U.S. coin.

They are hoarding it for trips south of the line or saving it to exchange for a lot of Canadian cash.

This latter group is in for a bit of a disappointment, says E.T.M. McBride, manager of the main Victoria branch of Toronto-Dominion.

"We are buying U.S. coins but we are taking them at par. We have to consider the shipping charges we pay when we convert them into U.S. currency."

Shipping is the main problem with coins, he said. Unlike paper, which is easy to transport, coins are bulky and heavy.

(Some bankers estimate that a Victorian collecting U.S. coins and shipping them across the border to convert to cash would lose money on the deal due to shipping costs and despite the higher value of the U.S. dollar.)

McBride said that, despite the disappearance of U.S. coins, there would be no shortage of change in Victoria.

A coin shortage in recent years was the result of hoarding when the price of silver soared. The silver content made the Canadian coin worth more than the face price.

At that time Victoria banks imported large amounts of American coins and this eased the shortage.

Since then, Canadian coins have been made from a nickel alloy and are not as much a target for collectors and melters.

"With two mints operating (one in Ottawa, one in Winnipeg) the supply of coins should be adequate," he said.

J.A. Baines, manager of the main Victoria branch of the Bank of Montreal, said the vanishing U.S. quarter is "cleaning up" the Canadian money situation.

A large portion of Victoria change has been in American coin but it may soon be all Canadian once more.

He said bankers will approve this new trend because it will result in less work of sorting the coins. The feeling of relief has nothing to do with nationalism, he said.

Baines said he had heard complaints from a few people that Americans won't accept Canadian coins while Victorians will accept their money.

"It has to do with coin machines, not nationalism," Baines said. "Canadian coins won't work in Amercian machines like parking meters while American coins will work in Canadian coin machines and therefore are perfectly acceptable in this country.

"Maybe the Canadian government should consider altering the weight of Canadian coins so they will coincide with the Amercian coins and solve this problem."

Jack Hutchins, immediate past president of Victoria Chamber of Commerce, and manager of Sears, said the disappearance of U.S. coins should not be a problem for stores because there is a good supply of Canadian change.

Veterans 'Persecuting' Hospital—MacDonald

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Veterans Affairs Minister Dan MacDonald said in Victoria Tuesday he thinks a local group of veterans is "persecuting" the staff at Memorial Pavilion.

He told a noon-hour press conference at The Empress that in talking to about 100 patients Monday at the former Veterans Hospital he heard "no serious compalints whatever."

A group of patients' wives he spoke with later in the day had some concerns, he said, the main one being they felt the Pavilion, now part of Royal Jubilee Hospital, is short-staffed.

MacDonald is a veteran who lost an arm and a leg in the Italian campaign during the Second World War and after his tour Monday he said he has never seen better care in 30 years as patient and cabinet minister.

The local Veterans Rights Association, formed recently after published complaints about care, food and services at the Pavilion, has been indulging in a form of persecution of the staff there he said.

MacDonald said his own look at the operation has convinced him there is no justification for the critical press reports and charges in them "are in my estimation untrue."

He met with the veterans' association, a war amputees' association, Legion representatives and the Jubilee board of directors during his two-day visit.

There has been some misunderstanding of government policy on veterans' care and better communication is needed with the Veterans Rights Association, he said.

Asked if the hospital staff might not have put on a display of extra care for his visit, he said that didn't happen. It would be nice to have more staff but much has been said about the need for restraint and the government has to be realistic, he said.

The 270-bed Veterans Hospital, opened in 1947, was transferred from federal to provincial government in August of 1974 and Royal Jubilee Hospital was given the job of administering it.

Under terms of the transfer, entitled veterans are guaranteed priority care but not necessarily at what is now called Memorial Pavilion.

In a written statement Tuesday, MacDonald explained that the federal policy of transferring veterans' hospitals was announced in 1963 "when it was clear that the needs of entitled veterans in the years to come would cease to be for acute care; hence our hospitals would inevitably become institutions caring for long-term, geriatric patients.

"It was perfectly evident that if we found ourselves in the position that our only patients were older people, we would not be able to attract and retain a high quality of staff or maintain the quality of patient care that we are committed to ensure our entitled veterans receive."

MacDonald said it was clear that "if we could integrate our hospitals into provincial and community facilities, the full resources of local health services would be available and good quality care would be assured."

Government policy allows pensioners to be treated for their choice of doctor at their their choice of coctor at their choice of hospital at DVA expense.

Veterans' organizations for the most part support the policies because they realize it is in the best interests of the veteran in the long run, he said.

The transfer policy has been successful, most notably in quality of care but "obviously not all veterans support the policy.

"Some veterans prefer that a hospital not be transferred because of their attachment to it and because any change can be threatening . . ."

There are close to 900,000 veterans alive today, said MacDonald, and like all Canadians they may need acute, chronic, nursing and domiciliary care in hospital.

"Government policy at all levels is to provide adequate facilities to care for all citizens without distinction. It is not intended to provide separate facilities exclusively for the needs of Canada's 900,000 veterans."

Minor Liquor Changes

After such a long gestation period in two ministries of government British Columbia's new liquor laws were impatiently anticipated by public and industry alike. Alas, the announced changes (with more to come) are for the most part simple housekeeping measures. Liquor sales on local and provincial election days is not exactly earth-shattering news at this time in the 20th century. In fact, keeping the stores open will save taxpayers thousands of dollars each year because liquor branch employees will no longer receive a paid holiday every time there is a vote.

Other changes, such as bans on "tied" houses and the restoration of sampling rooms at wineries and breweries are equally mundane, if long overdue.

As for allowing beer and cider sales in sports stadiums or consumption of liquor in public places, it should be remembered that such practices are conditional upon municipal approval. That's like saying the prisoners can roam free as long as their guards say it's all right. Given their overwhelmingly conservative makeup of the province's municipal councils, the provincial government has simply ensured preservation of the status quo. Another section of the new legislation is even retrogressive. Municipalities or regional governments may now restrict or prohibit the type of entertainment permitted in licensed establishements. Strippers are not to everyone's taste, but if people enjoy this kind of entertainment it is not up to thin-lipped councils to prohibit it.

It is interesting to note how government assumes totalitarian powers around every aspect of the liquor business. The basic function of government control in the liquor business is to prevent abuses of this legal drug. At least that is the rationale used while governments cream huge profits from their so-called control. When it comes to entertainment in retail liquor or beer outlets, government has no place. That should be a matter for the owners and their clientele. Now that this function has been turned over to municipalities bars of one sort or another are sure to become even more dreary places.

Victoria area mayors reacted to the changes like moral martinets. Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith says drinking in the parks is an idea ahead of its time in Canada. Regional Board Chairman Jim Campbell echoed these remarks, saying our drinking habits are rather immature, mainly because the state hasn't allowed people to grow up on it. And Campbell, as representative of the state in this matter, is not about to start any new trends in order that people will have a chance to "grow up on it." Elected officials who smugly assert the people who elected them are too immature to handle a bottle of wine with a cold chicken picnic lunch contradict their office. These same people were mature enough to vote for the Smiths and Campbells, yet they are too immature to handle a drink in the open air. Such is the stupid logic employed by these politicians.

No matter the provincial government, it appears British Columbians are destined to live under parochial 19th century liquor laws for eternity. None of our elected hypocrites have the courage to try and educate the public through civilized drinking laws. The provincial government passes the buck and the municipalities sit tight.

Moo . . .

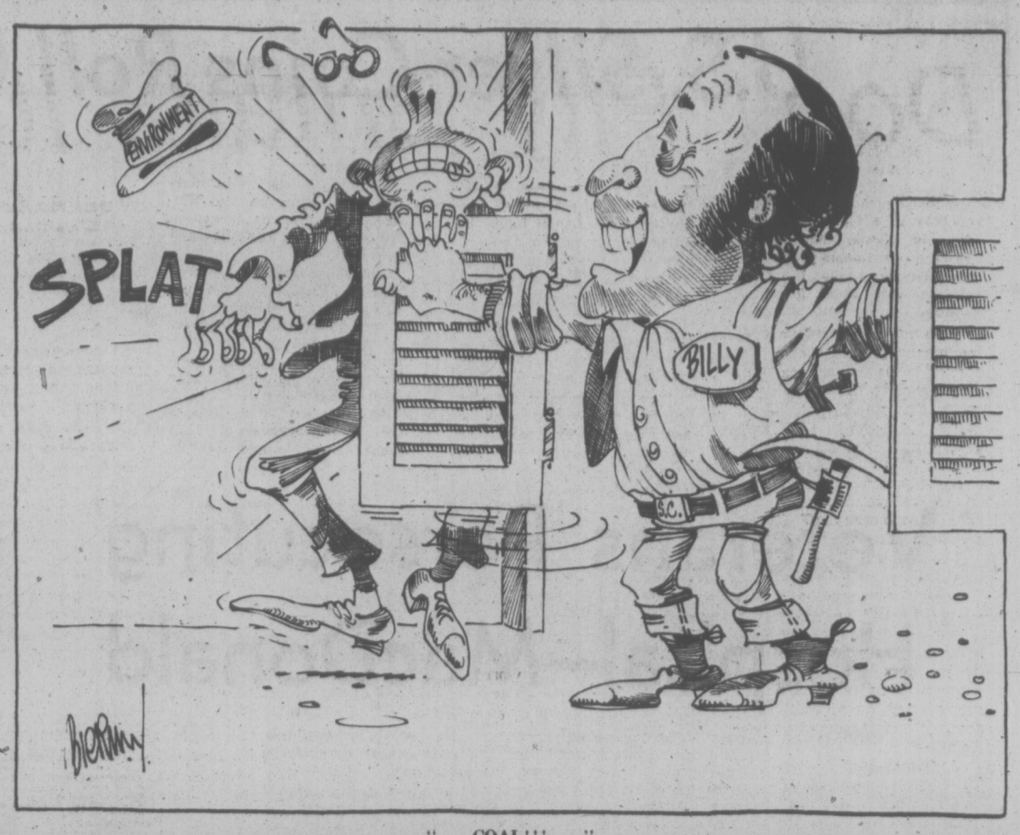

You think the choice of a black painting (well, okay, shimmering graphite) as the winner of the Victoria art gallery jury show was absurd? We read in the Tuesday Globe and Mail of another pioneering artistic venture that ranks up there on the heights with the black masterpiece.

Andrew Smith of Beaverton, Ont., makes paper in an old barn on the east shore of Lake Simcoe, using denim, jute, hemp, dandelions and scrap paper to produce about 50 types of handmade paper. The article was illustrated with a picture of one of his creations.

The caption says it was "one of Mr. Smith's wall hangings that was part of a recent show at the Isaac Gallery in Toronto. Before the paper dried, cows were allowed to walk over it, then Mr. Smith added dung."

Could he have been dissatisfied with merely the natural effect of cloven hooves, and disappointed that the bovines failed to register their opinions of his art?

Hit us again, Greg Snider, acting curator of contemporary art at the Victoria art gallery. Tell us once more about "subtle, delicate, and complex" surfaces. Maybe we can try to understand this one.

Ramifications of $ Dive

OTTAWA — The six per cent devaluation of the Canadian dollar, marked by panic selling on several days and massive intervention by the Bank of Canada, caused far less tension in the capital than the big 1967 speculative attack on the country's currency.

The immediate difference is that 10 years ago the bank and the finance department were defending a pegged value for the dollar, whereas this time the dollar was free to float and the bank's job was to try to keep the downward slide orderly. Even so, it took about one-sixth of the country's foreign exchange reserves to keep the down-turn relatively smooth — about $1 billion.

The announced loss of reserves in November was $758 million but this does not include the last day of the month when there was heavy panic selling of the dollar. Banking circles believe that at least another $250 million has been used in the interventions. The reserves totalled $5,837,500,000 on Nov. 30.

The changed value of the dollar will restore some of the competitiveness of Canadian exports, a major advantage since in some industries wage rates in Canada are now above American levels. On the other hand, imports will be substantially more costly and among the areas most affected will be oil supplies.

Oil Up 15%

It is anticipated that the OPEC will increase world crude oil prices by 10 to 15 per cent this month despite the attempts of both customers and some oil producing states to keep the rise down as low as five per cent. In Canada's case, the six per cent devaluation must be added to whatever increase the OPEC imposes. Oil imports in 1977 are likely to cost at least 15 per cent more than this year. The anticipated rate at which the country will be importing foreign crude next year is $568,000 daily.

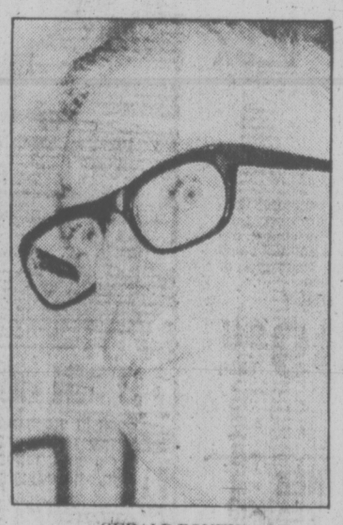

There are some domestic implications to this because it is inevitable that next year Alberta will again seek a price for domestic crude closer to world levels. The effects of the devaluation will probably be seen at the gas pump about midway through 1977.

The conventional wisdom is that the run on the dollar was caused by the results of the Quebec election but this is probably an over-simplification. Sources who have good contacts with major New York financial houses believe the process was more complex. The Quebec election, they say, caused both financial institutions and corporations holding Canadian funds to take a hard, realistic look at the whole Canadian situation.

Among the things they saw and considered were an adverse international balance of at least $5 billion this year with not much hope that it will be greatly improved next year, probably not getting down as low as $4 billion.

The massive deficit has been covered, this year, by even more massive borrowing abroad. Total Canadian offshore borrowing, including all levels of government and corporations, appears to have been in the neighborhood of $7 billion, according to estimates made in New York by the houses which handle much of this. One consequence is to send the cost of Canada's international debt service up by about $750 million a year.

For purposes of comparison, interest

GERALD BOUEY
. . . Bank of Canada governor and dividend payments going out of the country in the first half of this year totalled $1,101,000,000 and reached $2,313,000,000 last year. A further $750 million is a relatively large increase.

It is anticipated that borrowing on this scale would be possible for Canada in 1977. A reliable estimate, again traceable to the major New York houses, is that about $2.5 to $3 billion could be raised in New York by all Canadian borrowers, including the two big Hydro commissions and the governments.

Another $2 billion might be available in European markets but rates would probably be high as the upper level was approached. As a measurement of the demand likely to be placed on this limited pool of capital, Ontario Hydro is expected to go to the market for $2 billion in 1977 and Hydro Quebec will be seeking major funds. While the new Quebec government is considering slowing down work at James Bay, the cost of debt service leaves only limited scope in this direction. The more it is slowed, the more money had to go out on interest payments without power sales to offset the drain.

So far, there has been no move in New York to review the ratings of the major Canadian borrowers but terms may be harder. Much of this year's borrowing has been through 25-year issues and there is now talk that the international markets may be less receptive to terms of this length. Ten-year terms are foreseen as a possibility in New York.

During the sell-off of the dollar, Canadian bonds dropped on average enough to raise the effective yield by half a percentage point. On one day last week there was no market at all in New York for Quebec bonds — there simply were no buyers. This was a market aberration, however, because on subsequent days buyers were present.

Down to 92 Cents?

"No one here is selling Canada down the drain," one source in New York commented, "but we're looking at it realistically. As for equity investment, forget it."

Apart from the stimulation to exports, there are other ways in which the devaluation may somewhat improve Canada's international financial situation. In the first six months of this year, Canadians travelling outside the country spent $581 million more than visitors to the country left behind them. If the dollar stabilizes only slightly below par with U.S. funds, the effect on travel account would not be great. If, however, the spread is larger there would be some discouragement to Canadian travel outside the country and a corresponding stimulation to tourism from the United States.

It is by no means clear yet where the Canadian dollar will finally settle. It is widely expected that there will be an initial stabilization modestly below U.S. currency. This is accompanied by an equally widespread expectation that any adverse Canadian developments, political or economic, would probably touch off renewed pressure leading to further devaluation, perhaps bringing the dollar back to something close to its value during the 1960s — 92 cents.

Story Credibility

Re: Don Vipond's Nov. 29 article on welfare (Welfare . . . How Much Would You Pay?).

When I moved to Victoria three years ago I subscribed to the Victoria Times against the advice of my neighbors and friends. Having read the above referenced article, and others like it in your newspaper, I now know why I was given such advice.

I belong to no political party but I work for a living and pay taxes. I also think, and recognize half-truths.

Were I Vipond's editor I would require him to research his work. The money paid by the taxpayer is not the same amount paid to the welfare recipient.

I am certain Mr. Vander Zalm's department would have given Mr. Vipond the total 1975 expense and total recipients with the number of weeks each recipient obtained money. Perhaps the mathematics are too much to handle for a "quickie" news article. In any event, the real cost per week or how much we really paid would become evident. The values will be substantially higher than those published.

Your credibility as an editor is going down when you accept such work. So will your circulation. It would be interesting to see if the intestinal fortitude required to correct Mr. Vipond's article exists. The proof is equal space, on the front page, by Mr. Vipond, showing what was paid to the welfare recipient, and what was paid by the taxpayer.

I am certain such an effort would be a rewarding learning experience for both of you. I am certain it would enlighten a few of the populace as well.

Thank you for reading this letter. I have no desire for publicity, only honesty in the press and continued support for working taxpayer relief from high taxes. — Brian S. Lesiuk, 4326 Northridge Crescent.

Editor's note: Vipond's article never said, or even hinted, that the average welfare rates favored by those who answered the survey represented total welfare costs to taxpayers. In fact this newspaper and most others do report total welfare costs annually when they report on the provincial budget.

Blatant Game

Reading the recent reports of the proposed reduction of ICBC rates in the Victoria Times brought me to a slow simmer. It is such an obvious example of the old Socred game of conning people with their own money that I wonder if people can possibly continue to fall for it. Buying back votes in this devious way after smearing the NDP's handling of ICBC is a new low.

Dr. Leonard Laudadio, chirman of the economics department at the University of Victoria, said in a recent interview that Social Credit taxation policies plus ICBC increases have taken nearly $1,000 out of the pockets of the average B.C. family. Under the NDP, B.C. was better off economically than the rest of Canada but worse off under the Social Credit. He also said that the Social Credit measures weren't just unrealistic, they were stupid.

I hope the thinking public will read this tardy gesture to adjust the unfair ICBC rates for just what it is, a blatant con game. The really unforunate part of it all is that playing this game unnecessarily pushed us dangerously deeper into an already difficult recession. — Coleen Pringle, Vernon, B.C.

Women Priests

I am amazed to read your report of Dean Whitlow's reaction to the ordination of women priests in the Anglican Church (Dean Whitlow Denounces Women Anglican Priests, Times Dec. 6). Surely evolutionary changes are inevitable in all institutions, including the church!

Spirituality transcends sex in my opinion. Please let us have an end to all traditions —whether church-related or otherwise — which do not accommodate men and women as equal partners in any enterprise. — Muriel Mixon, 23 Paddon Avenue.

Prime Minister Trudeau—leading us down the slippery slope?

Mentally Spaced

After reading your editorial in your Nov. 25 issue, I would suggest that you are mentally on another planet to be taken in by the phony posture of calm, sweet reasonableness of that master of deceit Trudeau.

After eight years of dictatorial, hypocritical and arrogant leadership you would try to delude your readers into believing that this intellectual man of words, this clever, manipulative socialist could keep this country united. What irony!

Trudeau, the man of vision, has proven once again what folly it is for a nation to follow the so-called intellectual's pursuit of change.

This man of words who preaches unity by his actions destroys it.

The winds of change sweeping over this land are going to bring vast changes, and perhaps they will be for the better in the long run.

Trudeau has killed pride and patriotism in this country, in his own pursuit of the "just society." He has brought us to the brink of disaster. How ironic you can find praise for this dedicated socialist. —Anne Clarke, Rocky Point, R.R. 6.

Canada's Loopholes

I should like to comment on the letters from your correspondents M. P. Paine and W. E. Cowie, Profits Necessary (Dec. 1) and Tax Laws.

The article by Eric Kierans surely bears out that the big corporations have been doing very well and the article by Leonard Shofrin confirms the well-known fact that our tax laws are slanted in favor of the rich. This fact was confirmed by the recent statement that 252 men and women with incomes of over $50,000 paid no income tax.

I am afraid Mr. Paine has simplified the situation as the root of the trouble is the fact that after both the First and Second World Wars factory owners did not invest in the modernization of their plants but shipped their money which had been earned in the U.K. abroad. This is now being repeated by Canada.

I am quite convinced that after the Second World War the returning soldiers would not have been prepared to return to the "good old days" and unless a Labor government had not brought in the reforms and nationalization of certain key industries there could have been a complete economic turnover in the U.K.

After the First World War highly-skilled veterans walked the street and were maintained on a poverty level by the dole. Surely this was not the new world for which they had fought. After the Second World War the veterans were determined that there would not be a repitition of 1919. It is not right to say that there was no money in the U.K. as the big landowners still maintained their estates and even today the great wealth of the nation is in the hands of the very few. There are tax loopholes in the U.K. as there are in Canada.

For Mr. Paine to lay the blame on those fantasy professors who, he says, taught the students that profit is a dirty word is just too fantastic to answer.

I am a veteran of the First World War and I witnessed the situation in that unhappy country which had made such sacrifices for the victory.

I would urge Mr. Cowie to read the Senate report on poverty and the findings of the Carter commission on taxation. He will then find that the bulk of the taxes come from the low and middle income brackets and those on a daily or monthly wage just do not have the loopholes — perfectly legal — which are used by the well to do, U.S. president-elec Carter stated that the tax system in the U.S. was the worst in the world but I would challenge him on this, as our tax system here in Canada is one of the most inequitable.

Let me quote just one of these injustices which appeared in the Senate report on poverty. Fifty-six per cent of the incomes of those earning less than $2,000 (before transfer payments) goes to paying taxes whereas those with incomes of $10,000 pay only 37 per cent in taxes. Here in B.C. the Socred government raised income and sales taxes, apart from other increases for services but no super-tax was levied on those with incomes of over $25,000 per annum. Even the federal government, with much reluctance, only imposed a 10 per cent super-tax on incomes of $25,000 and over.

Another very fine article which I would commend to your two correspondents is another by Leonard Shifrin, A Double Standard for Cheaters. This shows that although there were 2,000 Canadians convicted of income-tax offences in 1975 only three received jail sentences. On the other hand such toleration of cheating is not being applied to those who cheat on welfare and unemployment benefits and the writer quotes several cases of jail sentences handed down in such cases.

Here in Canada we boast of our democracy and our equality before the law but in practice one finds another picture. — M. P. B. Wrixon, 301-1701 Cedar Hill X Road.

Fish Noses

I have noticed at the Undersea Gardens some fish with their noses off, just round blunt bloody stumps, the larger the fish the bigger the red circle. Why? Does anyone know why this is happening to them?

They have a peculiar way of reaching up out of the water, by and toward the outer fence of the sea garden. Their swimming back and forth has a sense of urgency about it. Purely and simply they want out, so bad they are cutting themselves shorter, looking for a way out.

When are we going to learn that freedom is beautiful? — Raymond Danson, 724 Yates Street.

Don't Pity Britain, It Has the 'Cosy Life'

By BERNARD NOSSITER
Washington Post

LONDON — Everybody knows the British economy is a mess and everybody knows why. The "Great" has been stripped from "Britain" and the place has lost its empire. It no longer buys cheap goods from docile colonies and sells back dear, finished products.

Investment to renew factories aging since the industrial revolution has been lagging, according to the conventional wisdom. A class-ridden society throws up radical, fractious unions that pull out men at the drop of an "aitch." A succession of reckless socialist governments has squandered the nation's wealth and crippled incentive by imposing a crushing burden of taxes to support a dizzying level of welfare spending. Nobody works very hard. The tea break and "I'm all right, Jack" are the guiding principles.

The trouble is that what everyone thinks is mostly wrong — with one crucial exception. The hard economic facts destroy nearly every feature of the conventional stereotype.

The lone cliche of substance is the efficiency, or rather the lack of it, with which Britons work. Industry by industry, British productivity is far behind other industrial democracies. An economist can measure or describe this phenomenon. But he can't explain it.

It does suggest, however, that Britain is the first post-industrial society to have tilted its preference from goods to leisure. This attitude, moreover, may yield some gains undreamed of by compilers of the gross national product.

"I have seen the past and it works," an American visitor enchanted with London remarked the other day. He may have been right only in part. For one thing, it isn't working very well at the moment. For another, he may have gotten a glimpse of the future, of an alternative life style that may seduce others.

Costs of Empire Outweighed Benefits

Consider the loss of colonies. Britain, the argument runs, grew great in the 19th Century through buying cheap raw materials from India, Africa and the Caribbean and selling the natives expensive manufactured goods in return.

Nearly a generation ago, John Strachey, a brilliant Marxist turned social democrat, demolished this in "The End of Empire." He showed that Britain's terms of trade were at their worst in the 1880's, the peak of empire, and at their most favorable in the 30's, the depths of the Depression. In fact, output has grown faster in the last 30 years — with the empire gone — than at any time in the 120 years for which statistics have been reconstructed.

This is not so surprising. Britain spent huge amounts administering, policing and aiding the colonies. From a balance sheet standpoint, empire was a cost.

Moreover, it probably saddled Britain with habits that remain costly to this day. British manufacturers sold to captive markets. They did not have to hustle, meet delivery dates or quality standards like those newer entrants into world trade from Germany, Japan and the United States.

Another tale popular here and abroad is the failure to invest. Britain, it is said, invented the Industrial Revolution and has hung on to the same grim factories ever since. Foreign television teams enjoy coming here and filming the smoke-begrimed mills that can be found in any industrial nation — a few miles from gleaming, new and unphotographed plants.

The dull facts, compiled by the National Institute for Economic and Social Research from a classic study by C. H. Feinstein, destroy this theory.

From 1870 to the First World War, fixed capital formation varied between 6 and 10 per cent of total output. In the 1920s and 30s, it hovered at the upper end of this range. After the Second World War, investment began to take off. By 1965, it was 20.5 per cent of output. Five years later, it had reached 21.5 per cent and by 1975, 21.8 per cent.

Since total output has been rising all during this period, the volume of investment was climbing both in over-all amount as well as in relative size. The cake and the investment slice both grew.

But isn't Britain a land of dukes and viscounts, rich in amusing medieval pageantry? In a nation of "Upstairs Downstairs," surely class differences matter. Workers bred on socialist texts must hate their masters and use any excuse to strike. Doesn't this hold down output? Doesn't this discourage foreign customers who must bite their fingernails until labor peace permits the shipment of their orders?

The answer to both these last questions is "No." A class structure can be discerned in every society (although Britain's probably has more of a caste flavor than most in the West). This is what keeps sociologists in business. How Britain's structure affects production compared with class systems in the United States, Germany or France cannot be measured. But if strikes are an index to class hostility, tempers here are above average.

In the 10 years from 1965 through 1974, Britain lost through disputes 743 days a year for every 1,000 workers employed. This was little more than half the U.S. total, 1,305. It compared favorably with the 1,665 lost days in Italy, 1,644 in Canada, 1,136 in India, 1,018 in Ireland, 913 in Australia and even the 810 in Finland. It was indeed much worse than the 274 in France, 243 in Japan and 50 in Germany. Where unions are weak or docile, strikes are few; "Upstairs Downstairs" has nothing to do with it.

Britain is undeniably a welfare state with elaborate programs to protect people from the financial hazards of sickness, old age and unemployment. But so has everybody else in the modern democratic world. Once again, the cold statistical facts demonstrate there is nothing exceptional about Britain's spending in these areas.

In the most recent year in which calculations were made, Britain spent 7.7 per cent of its national output to aid those who can't help themselves. This was substantially below the average for the Common Market as a whole, 10.6 per cent. The most generous, Austria, spent 15.3 per cent.

The British welfare outlay was less than the French and German, 12.4 per cent each. It was even less than that bastion of free enterprise, the United States, at 8.0 per cent. Japan was least generous at 2.8 per cent.

But somehow the British government does spend a great deal. Yes, it does, and so does everyone else these days. Government outlays here as a share of national output, according to the Common Market, were 46.3 per cent last year. The average for the nine member countries was a trifle higher, 46.5 per cent. Britian spent relatively less than Germany, 48 per cent; the Netherlands, 55.3 per cent; Ireland, 53.1 and Luxembourg, 51.8.

By this time, it will come as no surprise to discover that British taxes to pay for this spending are far from the highest in the West. Instead the "crushing burden" here again is about average.

In 1974, the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development calculates that the Danes suffered most among advanced countries. Nearly half — 46.7 per cent — of total Danish output was taxed away. The Norwegians, Dutch and Swedes were also taxed well above 40 per cent. The Germans paid 37.6 per cent in taxes and the French 37.5 per cent. Britain comes in at 35.6 per cent, above the United States at 28.9 or Japan at 22.2, but far from unusual.

In sum, no case can be made for the argument that Britain inhibits investment by wasting resources on welfare benefits and taxing its citizens to death. Investment rises, welfare outlays are relatively small and taxes about average for a democracy.

'New Jerusalem' Started?

A literary variant of this argument holds that "government interference" in the economy somehow holds Britain back. Here statistics will not help.

But the formless, ad hoc intervention here, usually to bail out a bankrupt industry or company, does not compare with the French economic plan and the grip of the government-controlled banks on French industry; the hammerlock a handful of German banks have gained over their industry; the elaborate planning techniques employed in Holland, Norway and Japan; or the carrot-and-stick methods Sweden uses to encourage or discourage investment.

Indeed, British industry is less regulated in many ways than its American counterparts who must apply to a score of agencies in Washington.

There is one element of the conventional diagnosis for Britain's plight that is demonstrably correct. That is productivity. Output per worker, efficiency, the intensity of work, is abysmally low. In almost any industry, British productivity is at the bottom of the Western ladder.

This is one more way of saying that Britain, with Italy, is the poorest of the developed democracies. In 1973, the last year the comparison was made by OECD, British output per citizen was $3,100. It was nearly double that in the United States, $6,170. France stood at $4,900 and Germany $5,610. Sweden was virtually equal with the United States at $6,140. Only Italy trailed Britain at $2,510.

Any foreign visitor here sees the low productivity in stores. The salesgirls may be pleasant, but they dawdle. "Oh dear, I'm afraid we've run out of stock," is a common response. In economic terms, she is adding less value to the national output than her bustling counterpart in New York, Paris, Frankfurt or Stockholm.

The data reflects the same picture. In 1970, even a factory worker in Italy added five per cent more value than his British counterpart. A Dutch worker was 83 per cent more productive, a French worker 64 per cent and a German 55 per cent. The average Common Market worker outproduced the Briton by 47 per cent.

One of the most closely studied and troubled industries here is autos. To the appalled disbelief of the government, its own think tank recently calculated that a British assembly-line worker, equipped with the same tools as his continental counterpart, turned out only half as much work on each shift.

Each British auto worker produces five cars a year. In Detroit, the figure is 15. The Germans, French and Italians produce 7; the Japanese 12.

For any given task here there are more men than are needed. Strong unions keep them there. In Fleet Street, it is understood that when two unions quarrel over three jobs, the argument is settled by giving each two. That means 33 per cent overmanning, 33 per cent less productivity than could be obtained.

Again, the impression here is that managers do not work very hard either. In London, the traffic jam of executive Jaguars, Rolls and Daimlers begins at 9:30 a.m. and peaks at 10. It is almost impossible to find a free taxi starting at 4 p.m. At lunch the best restaurants are crowded with expense account types, lingering over brandy or port.

Here is an area where class and caste do operate. It was once said that the best brains in Britain go into the army, church or the law. Now they stay on at Oxford or Cambridge as dons, go into the treasury or foreign office, find jobs with the BBC or the posher national newspapers.

Although attitudes to business are changing, the best minds in Britain scorn it. Only investment banking is regarded as worthy for anyone of talent. In Paris, Dusseldorf, New York and Chicago, the industrialist stands at the top of the social pyramid. He won't get invited to the liveliest parties here.

Engineers tend to dominate the industrial hierarchy in the most economically successful nations. In Britain, they are trained at polytechnics, a second-class college with less standing than new liberal arts academies like Sussex.

All this suggests that British managers, like British workers, are not extending themselves. They enjoy a cosy life. In the jargon of economics, they are satisficing rather than maximizing.

A little noticed economic phenomenon helps explain how they get away with it. The cosy life here is cushioned by an absence of competition. Concentration — the predominance of a few firms in any one market, engaged in a live-and-let-live existence — is rarely examined in Britain.

A Pleasant Place Where Crowds Amble

But is all this so terrible? It certainly does not improve the gross national product or output per worker. Those observant visitors, however, have noted something else about Britain. It is a pleasant place.

Street crowds in Stockholm, Dusseldorf, Paris and New York hustle and bustle, heads down, all in a hurry. London crowds tend to amble and stroll (except in the profitable competitive efficient city, the financial district).

Every stranger marvels at the patient and orderly way in which Britons line up for a bus, a subway token, a movie ticket. The garbage men stop to chat and call their housewife-clients, "Luv."

Crime rises here as in every big city, but there still remains a gentle tone and temper on the whole that is unmatched in Zurich, Milan or Detroit.

Costly environmental standards have wiped out London's great fogs and doubled the hours of winter sunshine in 15 years. These same standards, a burden for industry, have brought back 90 species of fish to the Thames. A generation ago, there were none.

London has five world-class symphony orchestras, all subsidized. The subsidized National Theatre is an ornament of Western civilization.

In short, what is wrong with Britain may also be what is right, having reached a tolerable standard, Britons appear to be choosing leisure over goods.

This does not mean that Britain can go on as it has in the very recent past, since oil prices went through the roof. For the past few years, the country has been sustained by borrowing abroad and that can't keep up indefinitely.

Even the gentlest tempers are strained, moreover, when living standards actually go down. Leisure may be chosen over goods as long as the command over goods and services rises slowly. But in the past two years, Britons have had to cut back and now confront another year of the same.

A new school of elegant pessimists has become quite fashionable here. Its more articulate proponents are Peter Jay and Samuel Brittan, economics writers for The Times and Financial Times. Both argue that the discipline necessary for Britain to earn its way and tame inflation are impossible in a democracy. It is certainly clear that the tolerable order evolved here cannot survive continuing cuts in living standards

But it is also too soon to insist that the new Jerusalem will never be built in Blake's "green and pleasant land." Indeed, there is some reason to think that the leisurely Britons may have already laid the cornerstone.

Sick, Elderly Still Have Right as Humans

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

The coroner's jury which investigated the death of Hazel Dobbin let its emotions run away with its judgment.

It was a sad case. Miss Dobbin, 87 years old and ailing, insisted on remaining alone in a squalid lodging and resisted all efforts to persuade her to enter a hospital after she became ill. When she was finally taken to a hospital it was too late.

To prevent similar incidents, the jury recommended that Ontario adopt a British law which authorizes the courts to order chronically ill, aged, infirm or handicapped persons to be committed to an institution against their will if they are living in unsanitary conditions or are not getting proper care.

Ontario once had somewhat similar legislation, giving magistrates vaguely defined power to commit supposedly unbalanced persons to mental hospitals. But this legislation was repealed in 1967. The present Mental Health Act authorizes the involuntary confinement of an individual in a mental hospital only when it is established that his condition makes him a danger to himself or to others. This is a sound principle to apply to all situations like that of Miss Dobbin.

The jury's recommendation should not be acted on. A law of the kind it envisages represents state paternalism at its most extreme. It would deprive the individual of one of the most basic of all human rights — the right to live his or her own life as he or she wants to, not as some well-meaning official thinks is best.

If an elderly or infirm person wants to stay alone in his home, and is willing to accept the risks and hardships that may involve, he should be free to do so. The state is justified in intervening and removing him against his will only where there is a threat to others — as in the case of dangerous insanity or infectious disease — or where the individual has become too ill to make any decision.

There is an analogy between these cases and that of a person who refuses, for religious or other reasons, to accept some medical treatment which is recommended by his physician. The law does not force him to submit to such treatment, just because it is for his own good. The decision is the individual's to make. Thus Jehovah's Witnesses may, if they are adults, refuse blood transfusions — although they can't make that decision for their children. Similarly, aged and infirm persons should have the right to reject the advice of doctors or social workers that they move to a hospital or nursing home.

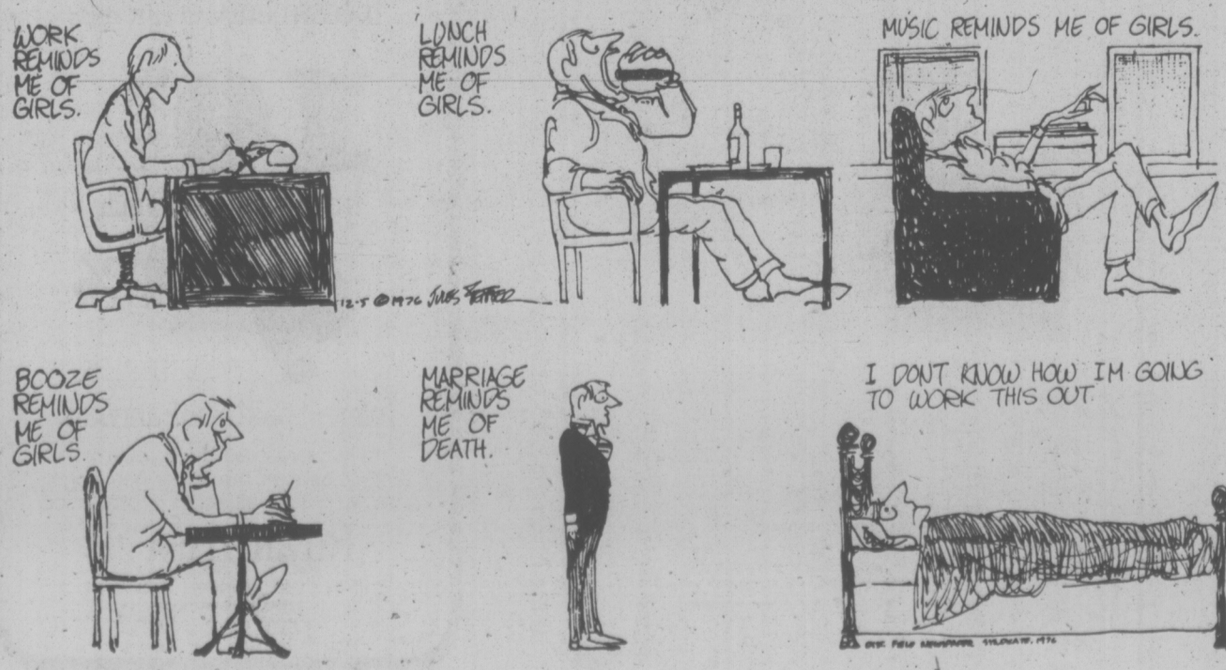

People do not lose their rights as human beings just because they are elderly and sick.

It's great to be back.

And now we're all happy. Due to Café Royal's popularity across Canada the demand exceeded the supply. So for a while, one of the world's greatest coffee liqueurs was unavailable. If you haven't already had the pleasure, now's the time to taste the very finest of Brazilian and Columbian coffees blended into a magnificent liqueur.

Drop in Canadian Dollar Helps a Bit, Hurts a Bit

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The drop in the Canadian dollar will help a bit and hurt a bit — but most people will come out about even.

The forest industry will gain the most but these companies also face higher costs for any machinery or services purchased from outside the country.

Companies that have borrowed in the United States have suffered the highest immediate shock. But they have made gains, too.

For example, B.C. Hydro completed a loan of $175 million in U.S. funds while the Canadian dollar was still sitting at $1.02.

If the dollar had not fallen, B.C. Hydro would have received less than $172 million when it converted to Canadian cash.

With the dollar around 97 cents, however, the Crown corporation will get about $180.2 million, or $8.7 million extra as a result of the changed value of the dollar.

Naturally, it will have to pay back $180.2 million, plus interest, if the dollar stays at 97 cents in 1977 and in succeeding years. If the dollar goes to par next year, the corporation would have made a cear profit of $5.25 million on the fluctuating dollar.

In addition to the fluctuating dollar rate, the company has to take into account the lower interest rate in New York. The $175 million loan (U.S. funds) was taken at 8.5 per cent interest. It would have cost 10.25 per cent in Canada.

First year interest at 8.5 per cent is $14.8 million. The loan in Canada would have cost about $18 million in interest the first year, based upon 10.25 per cent.

The cash saving in the first year alone was about $3.1 million in interest, along with whatever is gained from the lower exchange rate.

Over the years, the saving on the lower interest rate should more than balance off any losses in repaying the U.S. loan in Canadian dollars.

It all sounds very complicated and it is. Victoria bank managers say there are too many factors to consider to decide whether the city will gain or lose by the new exchange rate.

The litany is endless.

Restaurants will sell more meals to Americans next summer (because of the higher value of the U.S. dollar) but the costs will also be higher because many goods are purchased from below the border.

Travel agents will find fewer customers willing to go abroad but more will be looking at trips within Canada where their dollar is still worth a dollar.

The city as a whole will gain from a more prosperous forest industry in the surrounding area in 1977 but the city will also lose from higher prices of imported goods.

It is a mixed picture for just about everyone.

The only group that faces a one-sided result is the pensioner. He will get less for his money if he travels to a warmer climate this winter and he has no way to gain from a devalued Canadian dollar.

Churchill Port 'Still Untested'

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — The real potential of the port of Churchill hasn't yet been tested, says Ed Guest, executive director of the Port of Churchill Development Board.

"Before we get too excited over the results of the 1976 season, when a record 28,399,714 bushels of grain were handled, we need to look at the potential capacities of the facilities."

Speaking to the annual meeting of the Northern Manitoba Regional Development Corp., Guest said the Hudson Bay port has an average hourly output of 38,000 bushels.

He said based on a 16-hour day, with the northern Manitoba port operating for the full 87-day shipping season, a total of 52,896,000 bushels of grain could be transported.

The Churchill facilities have a rated capacity of 45,000 bushels an hour, and a theoretical season potential of 62,640,000 bushels. This year ships were handled during a 67-day period.

Guest said the port's record performance in 1976 was due to good planning and co-operation by the port management and staff, the Canadian wheat board, the Canadian grain commission and the CNR.

The only thing that stands between this man and a growing business, is $250,000.00 worth of trucks.

This man needs IAC action.

He'll get it the minute he talks to an IAC leasing and financing consultant. The man this contractor will talk to is backed by more than fifty years worth of experience and all the resources you'd expect to find with one of Canada's largest financial institutions. He'll show him how a custom tailored lease plan can help his company get the trucks it needs now. He'll show this man how payments can be arranged on a controlled budget designed to work hand in hand with peak cash flow periods. Step by step he'll explain the differences between leasing and financing and the advantages of each. He'll explain it straight and to the point. He'll do all this because that's his job. To put money into action for people like this contractor. What can he do for you?

Money in action.
Business financing, Leasing, Loans, Mortgages.

Is your business incorporated?

If so, up to $6,500 in tax-deferred contributions for retirement purposes may be available to you. Proposed amendments to the Income Tax Act may increase maximum combined contributions for 1976 to $9,000.

If your company does not have a registered pension plan and establishes a Deferred Profit Sharing Plan, the company may make tax-deferred contributions to this plan on your behalf.

You may also contribute personally to a Registered Retirement Savings Plan. By using both a DPSP and an RRSP, you can maximize the build-up of tax-deferred retirement income.

Power Hike Rejected; Cominco Role Queried

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Energy Commission Tuesday rejected a proposed 12-per-cent rate increase by the West Kootenay Power and Light Company and said it will ask the B.C. court of appeal to clarify the relationship between the company and Cominco Ltd.

The commission said the present increase may be charged to the 65,000 customers as an interim measure, but said the company, in doing so, may have to refund the increase, plus nine per cent interest.

The commission said West Kootenay produces about 39.4 average megawatts at its own plant, with the balance obtained from Cominco facilities.

Cominco, a Vancouver-based mining group, owns all the common shares of West Kootenay and 25 per cent of the preference shares. The balance of preference stock is owned by Canadian Pacific Investments Ltd., which also own 54 per cent of Cominco.

The commission has forbidden West Kootenay from changing or rescinding any of its relationships with Cominco pending the court's decision on Cominco's status, and has asked the mining company to follow the same course.

The commission said it will ask the court to determine whether Cominco is an energy utility as defined under the Energy Act, whether it is exempt from the act and if it is subject to regulation.

If Cominco is not a utility or subject to regulation, the commission will ask whether it has the right to examine or inquire into its generation, transmission, distribution or sale of electricity.

The commission said it also will ask whether part of an agreement between Cominco and West Kootenay would be void by reason of being contrary to public interest.

Cominco-derived power represents about 44 per cent of West Kootenay's total operating costs, said the commission.

WINDFALL PROFITS

New Democratic party house leader Bill King, said Tuesday rumors of a $72 million pipeline in northeastern British Columbia have led to windfall profits for stock speculators.

He said speculators were tipped off months ago when Economic Development Minster Don Phillips announced Aug. 11 that Quasar Petroleum would be given a $2 million government advance.

King said Premier Bill Bennett and Phillips are expected to announce the pipeline project when they visit Dawson Creek on Friday.

He said Quasar stock has risen over the last few months from a low of $3.25 to $8.50. Quasar owns extensive natural gas rights in the Grizzly Valley of northeastern B.C.

King also said there has been heavy trading and large stock price increases in Cheyenne Petroleum stock.

Some people have made huge amounts of money as a result, he said.

ADHERE TO PLANS —SMITH

GENEVA (UPI) — Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith said today the Rhodesia conference will have to be adjourned unless it adheres to original British-American plans for transition to black majority rule.

Smith, on his return to the conference table after a month's absence, also said any British presence in Rhodesia during the transitional period "would be more of a hindrance than a help."

He told newsmen at the Geneva airport that for the white government, the original Anglo-American proposals represented a contractural agreement.

"The conference will have to be adjourned if the agreement is broken," he said.

Smith accused Britain of breaking its word by saying the proposals represented a basis for negotiation rather than a firm package.

"Britain is stepping back from its commitment saying that the Anglo-American plan is just a basis for negotiation, whereas for us it was an agreement," he said.

Russian Heavy Water On the Way to India

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Soviet Union has agreed to sell 200 tons of heavy water for use in India's nuclear program following Canada's refusal to supply the material on non-proliferation grounds.

The decision, which became known when India reported the transaction to the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), is a rare case of Soviet willingness to supply sensitive nuclear materials to a country with a bomb-making capability.

The decision to sell the heavy water to India, therefore, appears to some experts to be consistent with the generally tough Soviet stand.

These experts suggest that in this case, Russian placed a higher value on its bilateral relations with a friendly country than on its non-proliferation objectives.

Soviet officials have indicated that the heavy water is intended for use in the Canadian-supplied Rajasthan Atomic Power Plant II and that international inspection and safeguards will be required as well as a pledge from India that the material will not be used to make atomic weapons.

In view of this, some U.S. experts believe the Soviet sale to India—while it is unusual—does not contradict Russia's non-proliferation stand.

Heavy water, which is a chemical found rarely in nature, is used to help control nuclear reactions.

United States heavy water which was sold directly to India in 1955 and other shipments of the chemical supplied later through Canada are believed to have been used by India in producing its May 1974, nuclear explosion.

The 200 metric tons to be sold by Russia is believed to be just about enough to "load" and resupply the reactor, which will provide power to a large area of northwest Indian near the border with Pakistan.

Playing and Trading, Cougars Finish Even

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Victoria Cougars' trade with Regina Pats may turn out to be like Tuesday's Western Canada Hockey League game at Memorial Arena.

While both trading and playing, the Cougars lost an advantage of one to wind up with a tie.

On the ice, the Cougars seemed to be headed for a victory until a gift goal enabled New Westminster Bruins to salvage a 2-2 draw in a highly-entertaining affair before 2,474 fans.

Behind the scenes, owner-coach Pat Ginnell dealt away two players to get three. But that, too, may wind up as a 2-2 result.

Defenceman Greg Tebbutt, 19, and winger Lorne Schmidt, 18, have been traded to Regina for defenceman-forward Keith Hertz, 19, left winger Ron Trafford, 19, and right winger Rick Odegard, 17.

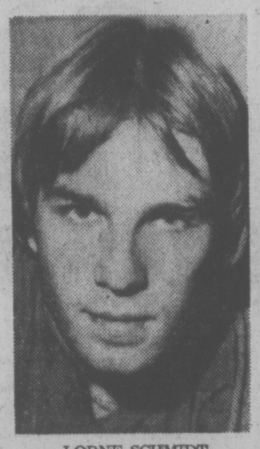

But Odegard, it was learned this morning, may decline to play in Victoria. After being informed of the trade, the six-foot-one forward left Regina for his home in Hanna, Alta., "to think it over."

Odegard's decision isn't definite,so there's a chance he may report before Cougars' next game — Saturday at Memorial Arena against Kamloops Chiefs.

As of an early hour this morning, the trade still wasn't officially announced by Ginnell. He left the Arena immediately after the game and without commenting on the deal, presumably remaining silent until he is assured that the Regina players will report.

Tebutt and Schmidt did not dress for Tuesday's game. Both confessed to being "somewhat shocked" by the deal, but said they will report to Regina.

One trade earlier this year didn't work out well for Victoria. Ginnell dealt defenceman Rick Hendricks to Lethbridge for the rights to Stan Swales. Also a defenceman, Swales, playing tier hockey in Edmonton, hasn't made the move.

LORNE SCHMIDT
. . . traded to Pats

While the trade — because of Ginnell's decision not to announce it Tuesday — had everyone asking questions, the game against the Bruins left everyone buzzing.

It was very rugged (but not violent) and very entertaining.

New Westminster's hero, albeit unwittinlyg, was a one-time Bruin farmhand. Victoria defenceman George Phillipoff reached for a puck shot wide of his goal and inadvertantly steered it past a startled Murray Bannerman.

The goal, coming at 15:36 of the final period, was credited to Don Hobbins.

Bruce Andres scored Bruins' first goal while Archie Henderson and Geordie Robertson counted for the Cougars, both on setups by Bill Jobson in the first period.

But it was the scoreless second period that packed most of the entertainment punch for the customers.

Over the final 12 minutes, 42 seconds of the period, the Cougars played shorthanded for 10 minutes, one second.

Bannerman, defenceman Lorry Gloeckner and the penalty-killers led by Dennis Fenske and Gregg Anderson were outstanding as the Bruins were held off the scoresheet.

New Westminster out-shot Victoria 21-9 in the second, and 41-32 over-all.

Gloeckner played for all but 20 seconds in the second period.

When they weren't killing penalties, the Cougars put Carey Walker of New Westminster to the test and the Bruin netminder also responded well. He made several sparkling saves to enable the Bruins to stay atop the Western Division.

NEW PROTHRO PACT

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Tommy Prothro will get a new contract as head coach of San Diego Chargers of the National Football League despite the club's 6-7 record this season.

DETERMINED ATTEMPT to score by Vancouver's Ron Sedlbauer ends with tumble over leg of Washington goalie Ron Low during first period of National Hockey League game Tuesday in Landover, Md. Low blocked 12 of 13 shots by Canucks in final period to help Capitals chalk up 4-3 triumph.

BANNERMAN JOINS STARS FOR CUP HOCKEY TOURNEY

Another seven players, including Victoria Cougars' second contribution, have been named to the Western Canada Hockey League all-star team that will compete in the international junior tournament for the Labatt Cup later this month.

Fourteen players had been named earlier, including Victoria winger and captain Curt Fraser.

Joining Fraser on the all-star team, and not surprisingly, is Cougar goaltender Murray Bannerman.

Bannerman, defenceman Wayne Ramsey of Brandon Wheat Kings, and forwards Ryan Walter of Kamloops Chiefs, Paul Mulvey of Portland Winter Hawks, Mark Lofthouse of New Westminster Bruins, Brian Hill of Medicine Hat Tigers and Rocky Saganiuk of Lethbridge Broncos are the latest selections.

The Labatt Cup series will be held from Dec. 27 - Jan. 2 in Calgary, Edmonton, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge and will feature a double round-robin tournament among WCHL all-stars and teams from Quebec and Ontario and the Soviet Union.

Coach Ernie McLean of New Westminster said the league may invite as many as 29 players to its camp, which begins Dec. 22 in Calgary.

League president Ed Chynoweth said in Calgary the number of players on the final roster is not yet known.

"It was originally indicated that they were only going to keep 21 for the tournament," Chynoweth said.

"But that number might end up being flexible. The exact number will be decided by the four teams prior to the tournament and could be as many as 25 players.

"The Soviets are brining 25 players, but only 20 can dress for each game. That number has been finalized."

On the ice, and while the Cougars and Bruins were playing to a 2-2 tie at Memorial Arena, Flin Flon Bombers drew with Saskatoon Blades 3-3 and Portland humiliated Calgary Centennials 10-5.

For Caps, Eight Is Great —Canucks Latest Victims

By The Canadian Press

Eight wins in 27 starts is hardly a record-setting pace for most National Hockey League clubs, but for Washington Capitals it's a different story.

The Capitals, in their third year of existence, moved Tuesday night to within two wins of their best seasonal victory total, edging Vancouver Canucks 4-3. The win also gave the club a share of fourth place in the Norris Division with Detroit Red Wings.

Washington, which won 11 games last season and only eight in its inaugural year, now has eight victories and four ties with the season just one third gone.

Coming from back-to-back ties with Boston Bruins and Philadelphia Flyers, the Capitals needed a goal from Garnet Bailey with less than three minutes remaining in the game Tuesday to secure the victory.

In other games, New York Islanders downed St. Louis Blues 4-2 and Pittsburgh Penguins dumped Minnesota North Star 6-2.

The Capitals converted three power-play chances into goals.

Guy Charron, who netted one of the Washington power-play markers and assisted on Bailey's winner, also with the Canucks a man short, moved to within two points of cracking into the league's top 10 scorers. Charron has 18 goals and 14 assists for 32 points. He was Washington's top point-getter last season with 71 on 27 goals and 44 assists.

Garry Monahan scored twice for the visitors who outshot Washington 26-21.

Islanders got third-period goals from Clark Gillies and J. P. Parise within a span of 2½ minutes to erase a 2-1 St. Louis lead. Bob Nystrom put the game out of reach with New York's fourth goal at 16:43 of the period.

The Blues had taken the 2-1 lead on second-period goals by Red Berenson and Pierre Plante after a scoreless first period which featured a fight between Parise and Bob Gassoff of the Blues.

The win gave the Islanders a five-point bulge on second-place Philadelphia in the Patrick Division.

Pittsburgh captain Ron Schock scored twice within 37 seconds during the third period to pace the Penguins, who led the visitors 2-0 after the first period and 4-1 entering the final 20 minutes.

The victory moved the Penguins to within two points of the idle Los Angeles Kings, in second place in the Norris Division. The loss left Minnesota tied with Vancouver in the Smythe Division cellar.

Sonics Gamble on McAdoo

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Supersonics owner Sam Schulman says he has reached agreement with a co-owner of the Buffalo Braves to purchase Bob McAdoo, three times the scoring leader of the National Basketball Association.

Contacted early this morning, Schulman said:

"I have reached an agreement in principle with Paul Snyder to obtain Bob McAdoo. I am willing to take the calculated risk that we will be able to reach a contractural agreement once the deal is made."

Schulman said a lawyer for Snyder would fly to Los Angeles with papers to close the deal today.

Bob McAdoo's latest effort sure didn't hurt his bargaining position.

The three-time National Basketball Association scoring champion, publicly placed on the trading block by Buffalo Braves owner Paul Snyder, scored a season-high 42 points and grabbed a team-record 29 rebounds in a 107-103 loss Tuesday night to Indiana Pacers.

It was an incredible performance in light of the off-court maelstrom which began with Snyder's statement Monday that since he could not sign McAdoo to a new long-term contract after offering $500,000 a year, he was going to trade the six-foot-nine centre.

In other NBA games Tuesday nigHt, Portland Trail Blazers routed the Knicks 111-94, Chicago Bulls beat Los Angeles Lakers 89-81, New Orleans Jazz defeated Seattle 110-98, Denver Nuggets topped Milwaukee Bucks 122-115 and Golden State Warriors beat Cleveland Cavaliers 120-104.

Dave Robisch scored six points down the stretch to pull the game out for the Pacers and take some of the glitter off McAdoo's effort. His offensive rebound—he grabbed the ball and put it in over McAdoo— with 1:02 to play put the Pacers ahead to stay, 102-101. His four free throws in the final 13 seconds iced it.

Steve Green led the Pacers with 24 points and Robisch had 20. Both are reserves who hit their season highs.

The Knicks stumbled against the Trail Blazers who were paced by Maurice Lucas's 22-point performance. It was Portland's fifth consecutive victory.

Norm Van Lier and Scott May combined for 17 points in the fourth quarter while Chicago's rugged defence held Los Angeles to 11 points in the final period.

Forward Aaron James hit 12 consecutive field goals in the second half, when he scored 29 of his 36 points for the Jazz who played without scoring ace Pete Maravich.

Rick Barry scored 37 points and Charles Johnson netted 22, both season highs, for the Warriors in their victory.

David Thompson and Dan Issel combined for 51 points while Fatty Taylor, Bobby Jones and Willie Wise sparked Denver's defence in the fourth quarter as the Nuggets raised their home record to 11-0.

Indiana 107, Buffalo 103.
Portland 111, NY Knicks 94.
New Orleans 110, Seattle 98.
Chicago 89, Los Angeles 81.
Denver 122, Milwaukee 115.
Golden State 120, Cleveland 104.

More Variety on Offence Adds to Lafleur Danger

MONTREAL (CP) — Right winger Guy Lafleur, last season's National Hockey League scoring champion, may be even more dangerous this year, say his teammates and coaches on the Montreal Canadiens.

"Part of his game was to do a lot of things without the puck and then make his play," goaltender Ken Dryden said Tuesday as the Canadiens prepared for a game tonight in Chicago against the Black Hawks.

"But now it's almost as if he doesn't really feel he needs anyone else up the ice to help him. The result is he creates a lot of opportunities."

Dryden, who probably counts himself lucky because he has to face Lafleur only in practice, said the Thurso, Que., native has more options this season than ever. "He seems to have even more offensive variety than last year."

Lafleur has 22 goals and 25 assists for 47 points and is leading the league scoring race again. The Canadiens, meanwhile, boast a 21-4-4 record and lead the over-all league standings.

Rejean Houle said Lafleur has the ability to cut both ways without losing speed.

"There aren't many players who can do that, and it gives him a big edge over the defence because they never know which way he's going to go. Most other players have a weak side and strong side, and after a couple of games the defencemen know what that side is. But with Guy they don't."

Assistant coach Claude Ruel said Lafleur has ideal linemates in left winger Steve Shutt, leading the league with 28 goals in 29 games, and centre Jacques Lemaire, a recent replacement for Pete Mahovlich.

"Lemaire is one of the best guys in the slot," Ruel said. "When he's there you know the other team is going to be busy, and that means maybe they can't pay as much attention to Guy. But the thing is that both Guy and Jacques are great skaters and when they're moving things are going to happen. You can't stop guys like that for long."

ENGLISH TEAM OPENS TOUR HERE FRIDAY

Hurstpierpoint College of Sussex, one of the top private school rugby teams in southern England, opens a six-match exhibition tour of British Columbia by playing Claremont Spartans at 2:45 p.m. Friday.

After playing at Claremont, the English side, scheduled to arrive in Victoria today, will meet St. Michael's University School on Monday and plays a return match with Shawnigan Lake Boys' School on Wednesday.

Shawnigan suffered a 6-0 loss to Hurstpierpoint when the Island team tourned Britain in 1974.

The English squad, which has eight wins and a tie in nine matches this season, will play three matches in Vancouver before leaving for home on Dec. 23.

Tim and Bob on Top

Tim Horrigan and Bob Hawkes snapped a four way tie for first place by skipping their rinks to victory in the Men's Super League of Curling play Tuesday at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Horrigan nudged Len Becker 8-7 and Hawkes dropped Steve Skillings, 9-2.

In other encounters, Ted Jurista defeated Gord Paterson 6-4 and Keith Dagg downed Bob Gallaugher, 6-3.

Horrigan and Hawks now have six wins and three losses each while runners-up Gallaugher and Skillings are each 5-4.

Martin's Scorefest Boosts Maple Leafs

Bob Martin blasted in four goals — two in the first period and two in the last 20 minutes — to spark Maple Leafs to a 6-3 win over Western Home Buckaroos in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game Tuesday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Bill Gidden and Dave Wilson added singles for Leafs, who were tied 2-2 with Buckaroos going into the third period.

Bob Nicholson (2) and Bill Pettinger scored for Bucks.

NEW PROGRAM IN BASEBALL

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Major league baseball has announced it will conduct a new youth participation program in 1977.

The program, for boys and girls between the ages of 9 and 12, will be called Pitch, Hit and Run.

The national finals will be held at Yankee Stadium before the all-star game.

Nothing to It, Claims Charley

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charles O. Finley shrugged off as without basis Tuesday the latest rumor circulating through the baseball meetings — the transfer of Oakland A's to Washington, D.C., under a National League banner.

"Nothing to it," the A's owner said as he prepared to enter the business sessions here.

Here's the plan as formulated by Washington interests and being circulated for consideration by the game's executives:

● Move the Oakland franchise to Washington, thus freeing the Bay Area in California for San Francisco Giants.

● Put the new franchise in the National League, instead of the American, thus balancing the two leagues at 13 teams each and temporarily stabilizing the NL's expansion problems.

● Persuade Finley to drop his multi-million suit scheduled to begin next Wednesday in Chicago.

● By placing the new franchise in the NL, obviate the conflict of having two AL teams operating in the same fan area — that is Baltimore and Washington — and open the door for inter-league competition.

Baseball owners contacted Tuesday ackowledged that they have been approached by the proposition but scoffed at it as purely speculative.

"There's no way you're going to get Finley to drop his suit," one baseball executive said.

Finley is suing baseball for damages accruing from cancellation of his sale June 15 of outfielder Joe Rudi and pitcher Rollie Fingers to Boston Red Sox for $1 million each and pitcher Vida Blue to New York Yankees for $1.5 million.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn voided the deal as being contrary to the best interests of baseball. Finley subsequently lost about $5 million in talent, including Rudi and Fingers in the re-entry draft.

A spokesman for the commissioner said such a plan, as proposed by the Washington parties, is not on the week's business agenda.

"That doesn't mean it couldn't be brought up informally," the spokesman added. "But it is highly unlikely."

The commissioner is known to be anxious to put a franchise in the U.S. capital which has been without a team for five years. His reasoning apparently is that this might placate an unhappy Congress which is studying anti-trust legislation in baseball.

The National League has been investigating possible expansion to 14 teams to match the AL's lineup, which includes the additions of Seattle and Toronto for 1977. The new proposal would conceivably take affect in 1978.

Jackson Joins Pirates

LOS ANGELES ((AP) — Grant Jackson, the relief ace who helped New York Yankees during their drive to the American League pennant, now is being counted on to be Pittsburgh Pirates' bullpen stopper.

"I thought he was the best pitcher on the whole (Yankees) staff in the second half of the season," said new Pirates manager Chuck Tanner on Tuesday night.

Jackson, a 4-year-old lefthander, was exposed by the Yankees in last month's expansion draft to stock the two new AL clubs, Seattle Mariners and Toronto Blue Jays. Seattle chose him on the first round, and Tuesday, the Mariners shipped him to Pittsburgh for infielders Craig Reynolds and Jimmy Sexton.

It was the only transaction Tuesday at major league baseball's annual winter meetings. On Monday, 14 players changed teams in six deals.

Jackson had a 6-0 record with the Yankees after being acquired from Baltimore Orioles in a 10-player deal June 15. He was 1-1 at Baltimore and had a combined 2.54 earned run average.

"We'll use him in relief and possibly as a spot starter," Tanner, who managed the AL Oakland A's last season, said of Jackson.

Reynolds, 23, hit .290 and was the shortstop for the Pirates' International League farm club at Charleston last season. Sexton, 24, who has no major league experience, split the 1976 season between Shreveport of the Texas League and Charleston. He hit .324 and .273, respectively.

Lou Gorman, director of player personnel for Seattle, said eight to nine clubs had inquired of Jackson's availability. Both Gorman and Mariners manager Darrell Johnson feel Reynolds can step into the regular shortstop job.

"We were dealing for younger people," said Johnson, whose club begins play next season. "We got a shortstop and a second baseman who'll both help us in the middle. Our next priority is a catcher."

Tanner said his club's next target is a third baseman.

Delay Could Be Dangerous In Weed-Control Battle

OUTDOORS
stewart lang

Dr. Peter Newroth of the environmental studies division of the water investigations branch could offer no quick solutions for the problem weed Eurasian watermilfoil, currently spreading throughout the Okanagan water system.

But the time for action is now.

Every delay in treating the problem makes matters worse by increasing losses resulting from the weed and by increasing the scale of control methods necessary when they are finally applied.

A review of the problem, which seems to have been submerged beneath the controversy raging over the possible use of 2,4-D to treat some populations of the weed, might be in order.

Milfoil arrived in Vernon Arm of Okanagan Lake around 1970 and has spread rapidly both upstream and downstream, colonizing lakeshores and channels as far south as Osoyoos Lake, just north of the international boundary.

"Eurasian watermilfoil is an aggressive weedy species which actively outcompetes other species present," said Newroth.

There is evidence it changes the local environment to suit itself by trapping silt, creating reservoirs of organic material and growing to such densities that it damps out wave action and slows down currents.

"It has a lot of negative attributes and very few positive attributes," explained Newroth, who added that its wide range of habitat makes control difficult to an extreme.

Dead or dying weeds wash up on shore to create a mucky mess out of sandy beaches and the organic material also promotes an oxygen demand in the water that affects shore-spawning fish such as kokanee.

Course species such as squawfish, encouraged by the weedy growth, compound the problem by feeding on the juveniles of desirable game species.

Besides detracting from the beaches, the weed has a tremendous affect on swimming and boating. Milfoil is especially prevalent around marinas, docks and launching facilities and posters have been put up throughout the Okanagan encouraging boaters to remove the weeds from their propellers, trailers and motor wells immediately after leaving the water.

The innermost layer of weeds wrapped around a prop will remain damp and alive — ready to grow in the next body of water.

All of this has a cummulative affect on the tourist industry.

Eurasian watermilfoil will grow at a rate of two inches per day during the summer but slows down or even dies back slightly during the winter.

It's habitat ranges from brackish semi-salt water at sea level right up to the crystal-clear waters of alpine lakes and will grow on any type of bottom from silt to fairly course stones. Colonies have even become established among the cobbles of flow channels in the Okanagan.

Fortunately, in terms of total area affected, it is limited to the shoreline areas of lakes down to a maximum depth of 25 feet.

The spread of the weeds is hastened in a variety of ways. Wind, waves, currents, people and waterfowl all help to spread fragments which establish new colonies.

"Every inch of the plant has a potential for growing a new plant," said Newroth.

He added that the fact it is gradually spreading rather than erupting all over holds promise that the trend can be reversed.

But it won't be easy or cheap and the possibility of it spreading to other systems is a grave threat. The Shuswap system, which drains into the Fraser River, lies just over a divide.

A recent and extensive survey indicates that no intrusion into the Shuswap has yet taken place.

The mild climate of the Fraser River estuary would permit growth throughout most of the year and controlling milfoil in about 1,500 miles of drainage and irrigation canals throughout the area "would be murder."

Flood control experts should also feel alarmed because, as Newroth said, "hydraulic efficiencies drop to about 50 per cent with watermilfoil in a channel."

"You just can't put the same volume of water through it anymore."

"So what does this have to do with us on Vancouver Island?" you might ask.

The answer is obvious.

Aside from the drain on our tax dollars to fight the problem, Eurasian watermilfoil has been found in Seattle's Lake Washington, Lake Sammamish and half a dozen other smaller lakes in the area, which isn't all that far away.

And, since experiments have proved that milfoil seeds exposed to the acidity level found in the gut of waterfowl actually germinate faster than unexposed seeds, I'd say there's cause for alarm.

After all, there is an increasing demand on recreational areas on the Island and the trout in some of our lakes are shore spawners.

On Friday, we'll discuss possible control methods.

BORG BRAVELY URGES NO MONEY FOR WOMEN

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados (AP) — Swedish tennis star Bjorn Borg says he had no sympathy with women players who demand equal pay with men.

"As far as I am concerned, the women shouldn't be paid at all," Borg, the Wimbledon champion this year, told a news conference.

He said the women had no grounds for their demands. They did not attract the same crowds as men and, in addition, played less.

Women players have threatened to boycott the Wimbledon tournament in 1977 unless they were given a substantial rise in prize money. They changed their minds last week when higher prizes for women were approved.

BJORN BORG TOPS VOTING

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Wimbledon tennis champion Bjorn Borg was picked as Sweden's outstanding athlete of 1976 in a vote by the Stockholm Sportswriters Club Tuesday. Ingemar Stenmark, Alpine World Cup winner, was second followed by Olympic 3000-metrre steeplechase gold medalist Anders Gaerderud, Olympic road-cycling champion Bernt Johansson and defenceman Borje Salming of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League.

Racers Climb Close to Top

By The Canadian Press

Indianapolis Racers moved to within one point of first place in the East Division of the World Hockey Association on Tuesday night with Hugh Harris scoring the decisive overtime goal.

The Toronto native scored at 7:17 of overtime to give the Racers a 3-2 win over Birmingham Bulls. The win, combined with Quebec's 4-2 loss at the hands of Edmonton Oilers, moved Indianapolis to within a single point of the Nordiques.

In the other games, Winnipeg Jets got their first win over Phoenix Roadrunners with a 4-2 decision, Edmonton Oilers defeated Quebec Nordiques 4-2 and Minnesota Fighting Saints beat New England Whalers 4-2.

Harris now has 16 goals for the season, tops on the club. He managed a total of only 17 goals last season with the Cowboys and Racers.

It was the Bulls' fifth overtime and 13th one-goal loss of the season.

Birmingham held a 1-0 lead after the first period on a goal by Peter Marrin, but fell behind 2-1 after two as Darryl Maggs and Blair MacDonald scored for the visitors.

Jeff Jacques tied the score for Birmingham late in the second period to set up the overtime.

At Quebec, Norm Ullman scored near the midway mark of the third period to break a 2-2 tie as Edmonton recorded its win.

Rick Morris, Greg Boddy and Bob Russell added the other Edmonton markers with Marc Tardiff scoring both Quebec goals.

Richard Brodeur handled 26 shots for Quebec, while Dave Dryden stopped 26 in the Edmonton net.

Mike Antonovich of Minnesota scored on a 30-foot slapshot to break a 2-2 tie in St. Paul, Minn.

Gord Gallant, Butch Deadmarsh and Al McDonough scored the other Minnesota goals.

Ralph Backstrom and Tom Webster scored for New England.

Perry Miller scored twice in Winnipeg to lead the scoring for the Jets who also got two power play goals.

NETS AGREE TO REBATE

NEW YORK (UPI) — In a highly unusual settlement, the New York Nets have agreed to offer a 10 per cent cash rebate to season ticket holders unhappy about the sale of Julius Erving, it was announced jointly Tuesday by the club and New York attorney-general Louis J. Lefkowitz.

The attorney general said that Long Island Sports, a limited partnership which owns the first-year National Basketball Association team, has entered into an agreement with his office to give ticket holders the option of receiving a 10 per cent cash rebate on the price of season tickets purchased, to be paid by next Aug. 31, or a 10 per cent discount toward tickets for next season.

However, under the terms of the arrangement, any subscriber seeking a rebate would have to submit a notarized affidavit asserting, under oath, that he purchased his tickets solely on the basis that Erving would be playing for the Nets, and that he is using the tickets for personal use only and not for business or resale purposes.

"There has been no wrongdoing or misrepresentation with respect to the sale of season tickets," said Roy Boe, president of the Nets. "However, after working very closely with the attorney general's office, and in the interest of maintaining a harmonious relationship with our present subscribers and all basketball fans on Long Island, I have decided some added inducements should be offered."

Jackie Parker Gets Hall Spot

NEW YORK (AP) — Jackie Parker, who sparked Edmonton Eskimos to three straight Canadian Football League championships in the mid-1950s, and a former Toronto Argonaut head coach, the late Bill Swiaki, were among 11 former greats inducted into U.S. college football's Hall of Fame Tuesday night.

Parker was a standout running back at Mississippi State while Swiaki was an end at Columbia.

Inducted with them were Heisman Trophy winners Vic Janowicz of Ohio State and John David Crow of Texas A and M.

Besides Parker and Swiaki and running backs Janowicz and Crow, the other Hall of Fame inductees included Notre Dame halfback Creighton Miller, Washingtoin tackle Vic Markov, Missouri centre Darold Jenkins, UCLA and Santa Clara end-halfback Tom Fears, Penn State end Dexter Very, Washington and Lee back Eddie Cameron and San Francisco back Ollie Matson. A 12th inductee was George Red Munger, longtime coach at the University of Pennsylvania.

Annemarie Back on Slopes For Another World Cup Bid

From AP-Reuter

VAL d'ISERE, France (CP) — Austrian star Annemarie Proell-Moser returns from retirement today in the first World Cup event of the international ski season, hoping to win the downhill race for the third time in her career.

Proell-Moser, 23, who dominated the international women's circuit for five years until her retirement at the end of the 1974-75 season, showed in training runs Monday that she had lost none of her form.

She easily won both practice runs followed by two Swiss women, 1972 double Olympic gold medallist Marie-Therese Nadig and the winner of last year's Val d'Isere downhill, Bernadette Zurbriggen.

Proell-Moser won the women's World Cup every year from 1971-1975 before retiring from international racing following her marriage. She did not participate in the 1976 Winter Olympics at Innsbruck, Austria, and until recently was not expected to reappear in toprank competition.

"I am still in excellent condition and I just feel I want to race again," she said in explaining her return from retirement after only one year's absence.

With West Germany's Rosie Mittermaier bowing out after winning two golds at the Innsbruck Olympics and World Cup honors last season, the Austrian girl feels confident of resuming her role as the world's premier woman skier.

Until the Christmas break, Canada's delegation on the women's World Cup tour will be led by Kathy Kreiner of Timmins, Ont., winner of the Olympic giant slalom that blocked Mitterfaier's bid to become the first ever woman to sweep three Olympic races.

Kreiner is joined by Susan Clifford of Old Chelsea, Que., Karen Cloutier of Lorraine, Que., and Jeanette Zanier from Trail, B.C.

Proell-Moser said she was particularly eager to win the 2,-150-metre Val d'Isere downhill race against Zurbriggen, who beat her in her last appearance here in December, 1974.

"I went training with the Austrian men's team in Schladming last week," she said Tuesday. "It was really tough. Your reflexes get so fast that it seems easy here in Val d'Isere. But my training times mean nothing. The other girls are holding back."

In the men's competition, which gets under way Friday, much of Canada's interest will be on its downhill aces who made dynamic inroads in international race circles last season.

Ken Read of Calgary, who won this race last season, seems to have shaken off some nagging injuries that plagued him last year. So has Dave Irwin of Thunder Bay, Ont., another downhill gold medallist on last winter's circuit.

Reed, Irwin and Jim Hunter of Calgary gave Canada an unheard of three placings in the top 10 in the men's downhill at the Olympics and with Toronto's Steve Podborski and Dave Murray of Abbottsford, B.C., they will be a power to reckon with on this season's go-round.

Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark, winner of four straight pre-World Cup races, has already given fair indication he's ready to repeat as men's Cup holder.

Although not as strong at downhill as in the slaloms, he is favored to take an early lead with his major threats coming from Italians Gustavo Thoeni and Piero Gros. Austrian downhiller Franz Klammer, who seems able to beat anybody on a direct drop trajectory, cannot stay with the 20-year-old Swede or the Italian stars in the slalom events.

More than one metre of snow fell on the course in the last 48 hours, and a violent blizzard on the Bellevarde mountain forced organizers to cancel two training runs scheduled for Tuesday morning.

Midget Quartet On Sunday Card

Professional wrestlers swing to a Sunday date next weekend at Memorial Arena with a tag-team title match and three bouts involving midgets highlighting the six-bout card.

Kurt von Hess and John Quinn, claimants to a Canadian team crown, will face challengers Sika and Afa Anoia in a heavyweight tag event.

Tokyo Joe and Billy the Kid will go against the Haiti Kid and Cowboy Lang in a midget tag-team encounter and the four little men will also be paired for two individual bouts.

Braves Bomb Bruce

Bruce Morrow, goalkeeper for Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking, must have felt he was living a bad dream in which he'd been transformed into a shooting gallery target for 60 minutes.

Saanich Braves peppered Morrow with 97 shots Tuesday night while rolling to a 17-2 decision over Truckers in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Pearkes Arena.

Morrow blocked 30 of 34 shots in the first period, lost a little ground by bobbling six of 27 in the second period and finished up with 29 stops out of 36 shots in the final frame.

Wayne Larsen set the pace for Saanich with four goals. Two-goal efforts were added by Ron Jobson, Ed Beauchemin, Bob Coldwell and Wayne Himmelman.

Ron Mayea and Scott Morrow replied for Lake Cowichan.

Ipswich Grabs Top Berth

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP) — Ipswich defeated Birmingham, 4-2, Tuesday night and moved into top place in the English soccer league. The win sent Ipswich above Liverpool, the defending champions, with 26 points from 17 games. Liverpool has 25 points.

Ipswich trailed 2-1 at halftime but stormed back in the second half. Brian Talbot, midfield star, scored the last two goals. A crowd of 31,161 at Birmingham's St. Andrew's Stadium saw the see-sawing match.

Clive Woods opened up the Birmingham defence with a clever cross from the wing and gave Paul Mariner the chance to shoot Ipswich into the lead in the 10th minute.

Birmingham hit back and took over the lead with two fine goals. Clever passing between Terry Hibbitt and Trevor Francis ended with John Connolly shooting home three minutes after the Ipswich goal. Kenny Burns made it 2-1 for Birmingham in the 25th minute.

Ipswich drew level in the 49th minute, when Mariner nodded the ball down for John Wark to volley a left-foot drive into the Birmingham net.

Birmingham had to reshuffle its team after Gary Pendrey was injured and carried off, and they lost all their rhythm. Talbot moved forward and scored in the 75th minute, after pouncing on a headed clearance by Joe Gallagher, and he made it 4-2 two minutes later from a pass by Trevor Whymark.

Manchester City drew 0-0 at Middlesbrough and moved into joint third place with Newcastle. Both teams have 22 points from 17 games.

In second-division action, Southampton and Chelsea played to a 1-1 draw.

QUEEN'S PARK OUSTS COLOGNE

COLOGNE, West Germany (Reuter) — A goal in the fourth minute by Don Masson gave England's Queen's Park Rangers a place in the quarter-finals of the UEFA Cup soccer tournament despite a 4-1 loss to FC Cologne Tuesday night.

The German team won an action-packed second leg played in freezing weather before 37,000 fans. But the London club took the home-and-home series under the away-goals rule with Masson's goal counting double when the aggregate score was a draw.

The Rangers, who won the first game 3-0, extended their margin to four when Masson sidefooted in a speculative cross from Leach. That left the Germans with the task of scoring five times to reach the next round.

Led at midfeld by internationals Wolfgang Overath and Heinz Flohe, Cologne hit back with three first-half goals from Dieter Mueller, Hannes Loehr and Wolfgang Weber. But although the Rangers were reduced to 10 men just before halftime when international fullback Dave Clement was sent off, Cologne managed only one goal in the second half, again by Mueller.

Other third round matches are scheduled for today with Barcelona, holding a 3-0 lead, plays Oester Vaexjoe; Feyenoord hosting Espanalo and holding a 1-0 lead; Athletic Bilbao of Spain, carrying a 4-1 lead, playing at Milan; and Juventus of Italy, after winning 3-0 at home, meeting Schachtor Donetzk in Russia.

The match considered by most to be a tossup will be in Belgrade where a record crowd of 100,000 is expected to see Red Star — four points clear atop the Yugoslav league — try to erase a 2-0 loss they brought back from Greece against AEK Athens.

Top NASCAR Rookie

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Skip Manning of Bogalusa, La., has been named Rookie of the Year in NASCAR Grand National stock car racing, even though another rookie, Terry Bivins, had a better track record.

Bivins, of Shawnee Mission, Kan., finished with a one-point advantage over Manning in the 15 races graded for rookie performance points, overtaking Manning in dramatic fashion in the final race of the season.

The list of tangible and intangible areas such as personal appearance, co-operation with the media and workmanship found Bivins deficient to Manning in a couple of key areas, according to a panel member.

MINTER STOPS SEALES

LONDON (Reuter) — British middleweight boxing champion Alan Minter stopped Sugar Ray Seales of the United States in the fifth round of their blood-spattered fight Tuesday night. Minter dumped the North American to the canvas for a count of six and then was pounding him mercilessly on the ropes when referee Roland Dakin stepped in to stop the fight at two minutes 14 seconds of the round. It was a bloody contest between two heavy punching left-handers who both won medals as amateurs in the Olympic Games.

CAMBRIDGE WINS

LONDON (Reuter) — Cambridge defeated Oxford 15-0 Tuesday at Twickenham in the annual Rugby Union match between the universities.

Blind 51 Years, He Reads Electronically

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Erol Hembroff, 56, doesn't like reading newspapers. He gets too dirty, particularly when what he reads makes him scratch his head.

Erol, blind since the age of five, literally reads with his hands, and a $5,000 portable marvel called an Optacon (optical to tactile converter).

"I have nothing against newspapers," Hembroff said, "but they have their disadvantages."

For example, the text on a page of newsprint is arranged irregularly, broken up by headlines, photographs and columns of advertisements that are supposed to be laid out for eye appeal.

Eye appeal Hembroff doesn't need. He has no recollection of sight and even his dreams are non-visual.

So when he sits down to scan a page of newsprint with his Optacon he never knows when he will run off the news type and into an ad, losing his place and perhaps the gist of what he was reading.

Meanwhile, his fingers have been running back and forth picking up ink, and when he scratches his head . . .

The third complaint about newspapers is the style of typeface with its open "a", the "i" that sometimes appears as a "t" and the "h" that often looks like an "n".

A small "a", to Hembroff sometimes appears as a "Q", and to him that single letter of the alphabet is subject to the most variation.

"But I'm getting used to your language," he smiles.

The heart of the Optacon is a curious substance that responds to electronic stimuli like Pavlov's dog.

Signals are generated when a small, hand-held scanning camera is passed over type characters. Two tiny electric lights illuminate the character and its shape is recognized by 18 photoelectric cells which pass electronic impulses along to a power pack Hembroff can sling over his shoulder.

In the power pack the minute signal is amplified and passed on to a pizo crystal, a substance that responds mechanically, in a knee-jerk reaction that sets an arrangement of tiny pins in motion like a massage vibrator, or a bank of solenoids.

Hembroff holds his left index finger over the miniature console of pins and senses the shape of each letter as the pizo crystal taps them out.

Optacon perceives only one letter at a time, so it takes a long while for a person to develop speed. "It reduces you to digital reading," Hembroff said.

His machine was the first one in Canada and only the 50th one manufactured from a California invention. There are now three others in Victoria and the price has dropped to $3,000.

But even so, few blind people can afford one. Hembroff, being fully employed, managed it on his own.

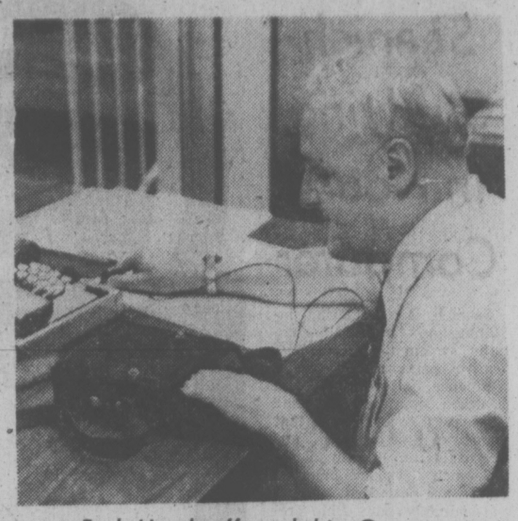

Later development in the field — spurred by the thousands of blind veterans returning from Vietnam — has produced a $50,000 device called a Kerswell that gives an overview of typescript, transmitting whole words and phrases at a time.

The U.S. Veterans' Administration, more charitable than the Canadian government — pays for such things.

Meanhile, Hembroff continues practising and improving his efficiency, and cares for his left index finger like a concert pianist favors his hands. If anything happened to it, Hembroff would have to submit another digit to "biological retraining" to achieve the required sensitivity.

Hembroff has been reading the printed word only four years. His first "language" is braille, which he has used most of his life, and his second tongue is the cabalistic lingo of computers.

In his job as a program analyst for the department of transport and communications, Hembroff has managed to marry all three forms into effective, well-rounded communication despite his handicap.

Church Justice Queried

Allowing women to be ordained priests in the Anglican Church is a question of justice, a former editor of the church's magazine Canadian Churchman said today.

Hugh McCullum said in an interview the Anglican Church supports the rights of native people as a matter of justice and should be willing to grant women their rights.

"There is a far more compelling case for justice in the bible than there is for not ordaining women," he said.

McCullum stressed he is not in Victoria to engage in a fight with the Very Rev. Brian Whitlow, dean and rector of Victoria's Christ Church Cathedral.

Whitlow gave his parishioners a letter Sunday in which he expressed strong opposition to the ordination last week of five woman priests in the Anglican Church.

McCullum is in Victoria to speak on the necessity of not allowing any major development in the northern part of Canada until native land claims are settled.

McCullum was editor of the Canadian Churchman from 1968 to 1975 and during that period contributed to a book published in 1975, on the pros and cons of women priests.

He said today he doesn't understand what all the current fuss is about and suggests that it is a small but vocal minority which is opposed to ordaining women.

A conference of Anglican bishops in 1968 and meetings of all independent Anglican Church representatives concluded that there is no compelling theological reason why women should not be priests.

He said the main arguments against women priests are that such ordinations would violate church tradition and create a schism between the Roman Catholic and Greek Orthodox churches.

Most people feel that because the Roman Catholic Church doesn't ordain women it is not a compelling enough reason to deny that right to women in the Anglican Church, he said.

He said there is a strong movement within the Roman Catholic Church to have female priests but because it is more of a monolithic structure than the Anglican Church, it is taking longer to come about.

More Security Urged As Escapers Hunted

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The director of corrections for Vancouver Island called today for more staff or electronic surveillance equipment to prevent further breakouts from Wilkinson Road jail.

Hal McGillivray suggested the extra staff and equipment be used until a promised new maximum security facility is built.

His call came after two "potentially dangerous" inmates broke out of the west wing of the 63-year-old prison Tuesday night.

Saanich police identified the escapers as Dennis Matthew Wilson, 23 and Thomas Russell Totten, 26.

McGillivray said the pair pried open a bar over a window in the dayroom of the cell block, tore off wire mesh, smashed a pane of glass and jumped six feet to the ground.

A guard heard the glass breaking and raced into the dayroom just as the second man was wiggling his way through the hole in the window.

The escapers crossed a courtyard, scaled a 10-foot fence and barbed wire, then fled across a field to the perimeter of the prison grounds and freedom.

Guards alerted to the breakout saw the men fleeing down a road near Cherry and Wilkinson.

McGillivray said Wilson and Totten apparently cut a bar from a cell in their tier, then used it as a lever to pry away a window bar embedded in cement that had become soft and crumbling with age.

He said the pair wrapped a blanket around their hands before punching out the glass pane.

The escape was reported to Saanich police at 6:45 p.m. and within five minutes five police cruisers and six corrections staff cars began a search centred in the Panama Flats area.

An RCMP tracking dog was brought from Nanaimo but because of the rain failed to pick up a scent.

McGillivray said there were 18 other inmates in the west wing section where Wilson and Totten were held.

There were 20 more in another section of the west wing and 41 others in the east wing. None attempted to follow the escapers.

Both men were serving sentences and awaiting trial on other matters. McGillivray said Totten was a parole violator and Wilson was serving a six months sentence for conviction last month of unlawful confinement stemming from an abortive jailbreak from Wilkinson Road jail last February. He was also serving two years less a day for a sexual offense.

The escape was the first since 10 men broke out of the west wing last Dec. 16.

The capacity of the institution has been set at 60 inmates but deputy director Harry Bacon said it is not unusual at times to have as many as 115 prisoners.

"If we can't get more staff then closed-circuit TV monitoring the day rooms would alleviate the need," he said.

Mistrial Declared

A mistrial was declared Tuesday in the seventh day of the trial of a 34-year-old Victoria man accused of murder.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer made the ruling in B.C. Supreme Court, and said the new trial will be held in January in Nanaimo.

David John Ross was accused of murder punishable by life imprisonment in the death "on or about Nov. 1, 1975" of Malcolm Preston Cunningham.

Cunningham was found dead near the CP Railway tracks and Humpback Road south of Goldstream Park Dec. 2, 1975.

The assize jury heard from 15 witnesses and was in the midst of cross-examination of Crown witness Gordon Anthony Caldell.

The defence motion for a mistrial was based on certain testimony given by Caldwell.

Mr. Justice Dryer told the jury, after hearing legal argument in their absence, that "something took place" which resulted in a defence motion for a mistrial and he had granted the motion.

The next sitting of the assizes in Nanaimo begins Jan. 4 but the date for Ross' new trial will be set later.

The Crown's case was presented by George MacMinn, assisted by Nicholas Lang. Ross was represented by Dermod Owen-Flood, assisted by Robert Higinbotham.

New Laws Considered To End Beach Uproar

Saanich council is considering new bylaws to crack down on beach-partying hooligans.

The council's parks and recreation committee Tuesday instructed parks administrator Frank Andrews to ask the police department how many beaches are plagued with rowdyism.

Municipal solicitor Doug Patterson will make recommendations on the feasibility of a bylaw to enforce restrictions.

The action was taken after a delegation of Arbutus Road residents asked council to erect a gate at Arbutus Cove to stop night visitors.

They told of wild parties, drunken minors, fires left burning near bushes, damage to private property and excessive noise that went on into the early hours.

In a 24-signature petition, they complained, "Our rights as residents and taxpayers are being denied us in favor of hoodlums and hooligans".

Duncan Smith of 4241 Gordon Head Road, who walks the beach each morning, said, "I've picked up more than 100 dozen beer bottles between April and October and at least 50 dozen more broken beer bottles . . . I don't want to be a garbage man."

A. R. H. Butler, 2208 Arbutus, reported fires had been lit near the "fancy wooden steps" built by Saanich and parts of the steps had been used for burning.

"I'm worried about the teeny-boppers. I've seen 13-year-olds with 21-year-old toughies. There's a lot of minor drinking going on. They should be protected from themselves."

He said the police seemed powerless to do other than shoo off the revellers. The fire department, too, had been unable to do anything. He and the other residents disagreed with a police department report that inferred the problem was not serious.

They were backed by Ald. Maurice Johnson who said, "The reports of the police are usually filled with inaccuracies. May be it's because we don't have enough police, bylaws . . . or guts, I'm not sure."

Mayor Ed Lum told the residents restrictions would have to apply to every public beach in Saanich and he knew of at least one other area, Sayward Beach, that is also posing problems.

Lum explained the Municipal Act requires public accesses to beaches every 600 feet and if Arbutus is closed another will have to be built close by.

Norman Guild, 2210 Arbutus, said its not an isolated problem.

"There are problems at every beach from Cadboro Bay to Cordova Bay," he said, "We're asking you to come up with a solution because Saanich has a problem. The police report is a complete misrepresentation of the facts."

Guild said he agreed with a suggestion by the police that a curfew might help solve the problem.

Council's traffic committee will also be asked to rule on whether parking of cars near the access and on the ocean side of the road should be banned.

PUB PITCH IN TROUBLE

The developer of a business block at Cedar Hill Road and McKenzie Avenue said today he doesn't want a neighborhood pub as a tenant.

Paul Grieve of Aske Construction said Bruce Wiechert was incorrect Monday when he told Saanich council the pub proposal has received approval from his company.

"He (Wiechert) had a short conversation on the phone with my agent but there were no promises of any kind," Grieve said, "I've written the planning department stating the proposal was purely speculative."

Mobile Home Firm Must Pay

Goldstream Mobile Homes Ltd. of Victoria has been ordered by the small claims court to return $1,000 a consumer paid to the company so mobile home could remain in a park.

The customer originally paid $1,145 as a commission to the mobile home company and recovered $1,000 of that in small claims court.

The provincial consumer and corporate affairs ministry, in its enforcement reports released Tuesday, said a frequent complaint against operators of mobile home parks is that landlords often demand some payment or commission from the sale of a mobile home so that the home can stay in the park.

The report said the customer was advised to take the company to small claims court.

The limit of recovery action in small claims court is $1,000.

The enforcement report also revealed that March 10 has been set as the court date for hearing on a charge by the consumer ministry against Traders Home Furnishing and Appliances of Victoria.

The ministry has charged that Traders failed to give equal prominence in newspaper and radio advertisements to the total price of goods advertised, which is a breach of the Trade Practices Act.

Fanning the Independence Embers

It is better to light a candle than to sit and curse the darkness.

So says Doug Christie and the Victoria lawyer has sparked the flicker that he hopes will flare up into a fire of reason hot enough to lead Western Canada out of the darkness that is Confederation.

The 30-year-old Christie is chairman and founder of the Committee for Western Independence. The Committee was formed in February, 1975, after the hassle over oil rights in Alberta.

"Previously, the province has been regarded as the owner of the natural resource of oil," Christie points out. "Then the world price went above Alberta's price and suddenly it became a federal resource through the export tax which in effect expropriated it and prevented Alberta from exporting it and getting the revenue.

"That was just a blatant example of the power of the federal government to deprive a province of its legitimate fair share," charges Christie.

"They wouldn't have done it if that province was located in Eastern Canada because of their electoral base. If it was Quebec or Ontario, there's no way the federal government would have expropriated the resource the way they did. They'd have to satisfy their Quebec or Ontario MPs to stay in power and the government couldn't govern without either of those provinces.

Christie

"But they can govern without all the west through the simple fact that the House of Commons has 68 members from Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and B.C. together while Ontario and Quebec have 88 and 74 seats respectively."

Though they have only 27 per cent of Canada's population, says Christie, the four western provinces contribute about 50 per cent of the gross national product. So they are carrying more than their load now.

"The balance of power is never going to shift without independence," he warns.

And so Christie and his committee members are pushing for the four provinces, together with the Yukon and the Northwest Territories, to break away and form the new nation of Western Canada.

Present provincial boundaries would be done away with, a new capital city would be created in a central location, all the duplications in the various departments under the federal-provincial system would be eliminated and the regionally-representative government would be much closer to the wishes of the people, promises Christie.

"We're finding that today, people are pretty fed up with the federal scene," he says. "Ottawa doesn't represent the wishes of Western Canadians."

"Trudeau talking about national unity to me is about as sincere as he was when he spoke about wage and price controls before the last election. The man to my mind has demonstrated total unreliability and if the unity of Canada depends on politicians such as Pierre Trudeau then certainly from an ethical and moral point of view we'd be better without it. A man who can stand on a balcony of a hotel in Havana at the time when Cubans were slaughtering Africans with Soviet machineguns and tanks and shout 'Viva Fidel' doesn't reflect the wishes of Western Canadians. National unity from a man like him is like the wolf preaching good behavior to the sheep!"

Trudeau's bilingualism stand has hurt Western Canada and, says Christie, practically speaking it's impossible for Canada to be a bilingual nation.

The country under Joe Clark wouldn't be much better, he says.

"If ever there was a demonstration of 'Me Too-ism' it would have to be the position Joe Clark takes on almost every issue. He has to say the same things as Trudeau because he's got to appeal to the same (Ontario and Quebec) voters."

And so, insists the lawyer, the only way out is independence. But doesn't he, in proposing such a breakup, feel just a trifle un-Canadian?

"No! Personally, I think I am more true to the reflection of what the basic rights of Canadians are than is the government of Canada. The constant erosion of the British tradition of respect for Parliament to my mind is more un-Canadian than any effort that I might make to re-institute it in Western Canada."

max low

A new nation of Western Canada would have all the natural resources it needed to survive economically and it would be up to the new government to guard these resources like a sacred trust and not let them be exploited for the affluence of one generation, says Christie.

It will come, he insists, in time, and will be achieved through a buildup in membership from the present 2,000 or so mark to around 50,000 and then through a series of provincial plebiscites.

Christie says the issue of patriotism is the only criticism of their position.

"In the face of an emotional attachment to an abstract concept of Canada, there's nothing we can say," he concedes.

"And it is a very abstract concept. It has nothing to do with the government because the government doesn't reflect Western Canada. It has nothing to do with economics because Western Canada doesn't benefit economically from Confederation. And it has nothing to do with social or linguistic values because the government of Canada doesn't reflect our values. So it has to be abstract. You can't point to any area where Western Canada benefits from Confederation.

"I've heard lots of people say 'Oh, you're trying to break up this country!' Well, that reminds me of the joke where the dissolute husband destroys the family resources by drinking, and beats up his wife and children . . . and when she asks him for a divorce he's irate because she threatens to break up the marriage!"

Road Death Witnesses Sought

An inquest will open later this week in the death of Mrs. Georgina Mary Smith, 95, of 4021 Saanich Road, who died after being hit by a car at McKenzie and Saanich Tuesday.

Saanich police said the woman and her brother Robert Velge, 93, were walking south across McKenzie when a car driven by Rey Alexander Carr, 35, of 5962 Blythswood Road collided with them.

Mrs. Smith died a few hours later in Royal Jubilee Hospital. Velge is in fair condition.

Saanich police have appealed for witnesses to the accident to contact the department at 388-4321.

Police are anxious to talk to the driver of a black Chrysler which was travelling south on Saanich Road just before the mishap. The car apparently had two radio aerials.

Saanich Studying 'In-House' Computer

Saanich is considering installing an "in-house" computer system to cut administrative costs.

Finance, legislative and health committee decided Tuesday to recommend that council call for mini-computer proposals from 10 companies.

Saanich's bookkeeping machines are outmoded, municipal administrator Bill Tremayne told the committee.

A study and report presented by executive assistant Frank Keeling said a new system would save $169,000 over the next seven years.

Keeling said the system would handle much more work without an increase in operators.

"It's time Saanich got out of the bush league, I support the recommendation," Ald. Maurice Johnson said.

"We'll be able to keep a tighter rein on the whole operation," observed Mayor Ed Lum.

In other business, the committee recommended an increase of 15 per cent in the 1977 contract with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Comptroller-treasurer Roy Broughton noted there had been no increase since 1975.

It will also recommend Saanich pay its share of a $3,000 intermunicipal grant to the Victor School Parents' Auxiliary. Ald. David Paterson said the money is needed to buy a bus for the handicapped attending the school. The auxiliary, he added, has already raised $8,000.

Centre Move Seen

Residents and youngsters at Blanshard Court may have a community centre after all, despite Victoria city council's initial coolness to the proposal.

Council's committee of the whole recommended Tuesday that the city purchase for $100,000 the Winnifred Clark Centre building on Kings Road east of Blanshard, which is owned by the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded.

The association's sale offer was first submitted to council last month, and appeared doomed because council insisted at that time that more than 90 per cent of the cost be financed by senior governments.

There was more arguing about financing formulae on Tuesday, with several different theories as to how much of the total cost the city might recover from the federal and provincial governments.

But Mayor Mike Young finally suggested, and aldermen agreed, that the city go ahead with the purchase and worry about cost sharing agreements later.

Young told aldermen he had received a "heavy" delegation on the centre proposal the previous day.

On another aspect concerning Blanshard Court, council appointed a special three-member committee — Ald. Ron McKenzie, Ald. Bill Tindall and Ald. Bob Wright — to screen a list of 21 questions which McKenzie wants to submit to the B.C. Housing Management Commission with regard to the operation of the housing development.

The questions drawn up by McKenzie follow his earlier outspoken criticisms about the operating costs of Blanshard Court, and his expressed doubts whether some of the tenants living there are eligible to do so.

Several of the questions are prefaced by the phrase "is it true that . . .?"

In one case McKenzie requests confirmation that a tenant is earning more than $19,000 a year, with his wife also employed, but is paying only $145 a month rent.

Another question asks: "Is it possible to run the social security numbers of the Blanshard Court residents through the Revenue Canada Taxation computers, so as to allow comparison of their total family income to their reported income?"

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Parkland high school student received a suspended sentence, six-month probation and was ordered to do 50 hours of community service work after pleading guilty in provincial court Tuesday to two counts of taking a vessel without the owners' consent.

Raymond John Marks, 17, 1806 Swartz Bay Road, Sidney, was also ordered by Judge William Ostler to repay half the $150 damages done to the motor of one of the boats.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Marks and another juvenile, who has also been charged in connection with the Aug. 27 incident, took a boat from Sidney to nearby Piers Island and returned, and then took another boat for a "joy ride."

A 17-year-old Sooke youth was ordered detained in custody on four breaking and entering charges and a charge of stealing an auto.

Conrad Gregory Lucas, of 2042 Church, facing two break-in charges in Mill Bay, one in Colwood and one in Cobble Hill and a theft charge in Esquimalt, was remanded until next Tuesday for election of trial method.

Lucas, defended Tuesday by lawyer Robert Johnston, is charged in connection with a Nov. 25 incident in which four youths were pursued from Colwood in a chase which ended in a fatal head-on crash at Nanoose, eight miles north of Nanaimo.

Ostler ruled in favor of Crown counsel Mulligan, noting that the alleged offences took place two months after Lucas had been placed on a year's probation in county court.

Two 17-year-olds, Cindy Jean Dalziel, of 1381 Pandora and Wayne Phillip Storry, of 55 Bank, were remanded until Dec. 29 for election and plea on three charges.

They were jointly charged with theft and possession of an auto and dangerous driving Dec. 4 in Saanich.

Michael Frederick Walker, 17, of HMCS Cape Breton, elected trial by judge and jury on a charge of possession of a dangerous weapon, a piece of lumber, in connection with a Nov. 23 Victoria incident. His trial has been set for Friday.

Hijackers Face Firing Squad

MANILA (AP) — A military court has sentenced two airliner hijackers to die before a firing squad, the tribunal president Commodore Gil Fernandez, said Tuesday. The two men had pleaded guilty to hijacking a Philippines Airlines domestic flight last year. The hijackers, Emilio Abarca, 38, and Cesar Tak-al, 29, both of the southern Philippine city of Pagdian, threatened to blow up the airplane with grenades. They later surrendered.

DUNCAN—Mayor Ken Paskin is missing his appendix and a holiday in England.

The 47-year-old chief magistrate suffered stomach pains Thursday night but didn't go to his doctor until Friday afternoon.

"He had a 3 o'clock appointment with his doctor and by 6 he was being prepared for surgery," said Mrs. Paskin.

They had planned to leave next Monday for a month trip to England, their first since coming to Canada 19 years ago.

Fibre Diet No Help

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A study shows that high-fibre diets do nothing to reduce the high blood cholesterol levels that are thought to be a warning sign of heart disease, a group of researchers says.

Proponents of the diets argue that a higher-than-normal intake of natural fibres found in grains and some fruits and vegetables helps to remove cholesterol from the body.

The high level of cholesterol, a fatty material that accumulates in the blood, is a major element associated with heart disease.

But a group of researchers from the University of Oregon, in a report prepared for delivery at a meeting of the American Heart Association, say new studies show that the high-fibre diet has no effect on blood cholesterol levels.

The 8-digit capacity of the Palmtronic 8 can be fully used thanks to the all-floating decimal point and leftmost significant digit priority systems, and complex calculations can be done accurately.

Percentage, Add-on and Discount Key
A special key simplifies calculations involving percentages. A certain percentage of a given number can be instantly obtained by the use of this key. Furthermore, the number obtained can be added to or subtracted from the original number by depressing the + or - key, followed by the % key.

$500,000 DAMAGES AWARDED

VANCOUVER (CP) — A French citizen who suffered permanent brain damage while in Prince George Regional Hospital has recieved more than $500,000 as settlement, according to The Sun.

The B.C. Supreme Court action, launched by the public trustee on behalf of Didier Lansiaux, 24, was settled after 11 days of trial before Mr. Justice A. A. Mackoff, the evening newspaper says.

Besides the hospital, defendants in the action were surgeon Dr. Brian Foley, anesthetist Dr. Elmer Ratzlaff and nurse Marien Smith.

Bruce Harvey, representing the doctors, told the judge that the matter was settled and asked that it be dismissed by consent.

John McAlpine, acting for Lansiaux, and W. J. Wallace, representing the hospital, agreed.

Factors in the settlement amount were the cost of future care in that country, Lansiaux's loss of income and loss of amenities.

Little Health Risk Seen from PCB Leak

VANCOUVER (CP) — An intergovernmental committee probing a leak of a toxic chemical in the Sheridan Creek area, 28 miles north of Williams Lake, said Tuesday there were indications "it is highly unlikely that any short- or long-term health effects will result from this exposure."

The group met here to discuss health effects of high levels of polychlorinated biphenyl (PCB) found in the water supply of the Cariboo-area community. The water contamination has been blamed on leakage of PCB from electrical capacitors that were buried in 1972 at a British Columbia Hydro station.

The committee studying the contamination problem includes seven provincial and federal departments and B.C. Hydro.

"We are starting to question whether there is a significant contamination problem at all," said Dr. Phil Long, director of the Cariboo health unit.

He said, however, there will be no change in the warning to local residents not to drink well water or eat locally grown produce at least until Dec. 14 when results from water and blood tests from 18 Sheridan Creek families will be known.

He said the discovery of a similar case in rural Ontario and similar findings in the United States have put the PCB findings in B.C. in a new perspective.

The levels at Sheridan Creek are significant and "we're not happy with these levels," said Dr. Long.

He said the detailed tests would produce more reliable findings than the initial three tests on which his original warning was based.

"We're saying we're concerned, but our medical colleagues are finding similar levels elsewhere and it appears to be a global problem."

Dr. Long also said a U.S. environmental protection agency level of three parts per trillion is an objective, not a maximum allowable level as has been reported. He said neither the U.S. nor Canada have defined legal restrictions for PCB levels.

Three of 69 faulty capacitors buried at McCleese Lake near Sheridan Creek and unearthed by Hydro crews last weekend were found to be leaking.

Excavation was to begin today at Hydro's Kennedy station where another group of capacitors had been buried in a remote area near MacKenzie. All the capacitors that are recovered will be sent to Mississauga, Ont., for incineration.

Advice for Vanderhoof Indians

VANCOUVER (CP) — A field worker with the British Columbia legal services commission went to Vanderhoof Tuesday to help local Indians prepare a brief outlining thir social, economic and legal needs.

The Stoney Creek Indian band had asked for funds for a study of solutions to area social problems, including unemploymnt and poor living conditions, but the commission rejected this, saying the Indians already know what their problems are.

Ben Prest, a member of the commission's native programs branch, will meet with representatives of Stoney Creek and other local bands. The commission will pass on the resulting brief to provincial and federal departments involved.

The brief is being prepared in the wake of an inquest in September into the roadside death of Coreen Thomas, 21, which focused attention on Indian-white relations in the area.

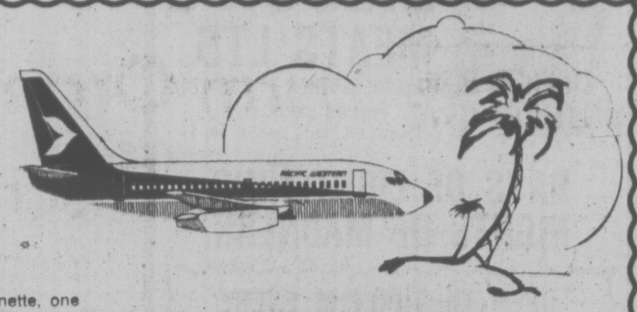

23RD MURDER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bruce Simpson, 28, of Vancouver is dead, the victim of a beating, and police are treating it as Vancouver's 23rd homicide of the year, the third murder in as many days.

Simpson was found by police lying on the pavement at the entrance of the Balmoral Hotel on East Hastings Street early this morning.

Flu Vaccine Not Blamed in Man's Death

FERNIE (CP)—An obese and diabetic man with an undetected case of silent peneumonia died last week about 20 hours after receiving a bivalent influenza vaccination designed to combat Victoria and New Jersey swine gflu.

B.C. health officials said they have recalled the vaccine for possible tests by its distributors, but do not blame it for the death of John Miscisco, a 48-year-old shoe repairman.

Coroner Sparling East, a Fernie physician who did the autopsy, said Miscisco died Nov. 30 of bacterial pneumonia—the type usually treated with antibiotics.

Arnold Lowden, medical health officer for the East-Kootenay Health Unit, said Tuesday Miscisco was not given a medical examination, but received the customary warning before vaccination.

"The nurse specifically asked him if he was ill because he didn't look well."

"But he had no complaints and told the nurse he felt better than he had in some time," Dr. Lowden said in an interview from Cranbrook.

Dr. Lowden said the dead man was probably suffering from silent peneumonia for three or four days before his vaccination.

His name was given to the health unit by his physician, following a request by the health unit for chronically ill patients.

Dr. Lowden said the dead man was overweight, diabetic, suffered high blood pressure, smoked 20 cigarettes a day and also suffered cyrrhosis of the liver.

He said the man had no adverse reaction after being vaccinated in the morning. He was found dead in bed the next day.

The health officer said 50 other persons received the same vaccine on the same day. All were contacted after the death and the most serious reaction reported by other patients was a headache.

Dr. Lowden said he is convinced the flu vaccine did not contribute to the man's death.

OFFICE FIRE INJURES TWO

VANCOUVER (CP)—Two people were taken to hospital suffering smoke inhalation from a fire that extgensively damaged the seventh floor of an eight-storey office building in the city's West End Tuesday night.

A spokesman for the Vancouver Fire Department said the two-alarm blaze also burned through the elevator cables and the elevator cage jammed in the shaft.

One fireman and an office cleaning staff member were taken to hospital. Office workers had left before the fire broke out.

Protest In Pen Grows

NE WWESTMINSTER (CP) — The number of prisoners on a hunger strike at the British Columbia Penitentiary rose to 260 Tuesday as 95 prisoners in the institution's north wing joined the fasting protest.

Prison officials said the new fasters made no demands, but earlier prisoners had demanded a $3 an hour minimum wage for any work and reconstruction of the prison and some cell blocks.

Penitentiary service spokesman Jack Stewart said Monday 42 prisoners in the institutions east wing joined the protest to emphasize complaints about a lack of proper bedding, inadequate washing and toilet facilities and a lack of exercise.

Stewart said the minimum wage idea is being studied but can't be brought into effect in New Westminster now.

He said the prisoners have made no official request for the minimum wage to acting director Bob Swan.

Stewart said a wage of $1.95 an hour is being paid to prisoners of the Joyceville Penitentiary in Ontario in a program that began about a month ago as a pilot project. Prisoners pay income tax, have normal employee deductions and use the money to pay for their keep and to send to families.

Firm Ordered to Pay For 'Discrimination'

A board of inquiry set up under the B.C. Human Rights code ruled Tuesday that Creditel of Canada Ltd. Discriminated against a Vancouver woman when they paid her less than two male coworkers.

The board ordered the firm — a credit reporting agency — to pay a total of $1,850 in damages.

Creditel was ordered to pay $675 to Mae Warren to make up the approximate difference in wages from May 20 to June 30, 1975, and an additional $1,000 as compensation for damages to her feelings and self-respect.

In addition, Creditel was ordered to pay the costs of proceedings and to refrain from further contraventions.

Warren was hired by the company in 1974 when the firm established a sales department to solicit credit accounts for collection.

She had to enter hospital in February, 1975, and although she returned to work in mid-April, her recovery was not complete, and her sales volume fell.

During this time, two male colleagues were fired, and two new men hired, at higher wages than those paid to Warren.

Industrial relations officer Bill Wong, who investigated the complaint, told the board that company representatives admitted the men were paid at a higher rate. But he said the additional money was to attract the two people and to support their families.

The board ruled that Warren should have been brought up to the same salary as the male newcomers, and that she had been fired without reasonable cause.

PROTEST EXPENSIVE

EDMONTON (CP) — The arrest of 61 anti-apartheid demonstrators at a cricket match in September cost $11,865 in police operations, city council was told Tuesday.

A total of 92 policemen worked on the arrests. Time worked reached 1,235 man-hours in a four-day period. The hours do not include time spent in continuing court processes.

The demonstration Sept. 18 was against a visiting team, which allegedly supported South Africa's racial policies. Demonstrators sat in the middle of the field and refused to leave but finally were dragged away by policemen.

'Too Old' Apprentice Sues Plumbers' Union

A labor department board of inquiry has been set up to look into the case of a 32-year-old man unable to apprentice as a plumber because the union considers him too old.

Kathleen Ruff, director of the labor department's Human Rights Code, said toda y Labor Minister Allan Williams has set up the inquiry into the case of Russell Burns, of Courtenay, who completed a Camosun College plumbing course in November, 1975.

Burns, a former pulp mill laborer, had saved for several years to take the course in an effort to upgrade his skills and income.

He was hired by a Campbell River pipefitting company and ordered to join the union. The union wouldn't accept him.

The plumbers union constitution states that "applicants for apprenticeship . . . must be between the ages of 18 and 25 years."

Burns, who said he has been denied the right to work, has filed two complaints with the labor department's human rights branch.

The first claims he was denied his apprenticeship because of his ag thesecause of his age and the second alleges that the union's constitution violates the human rights code.

Receivership For Saw Firm

VANCOUVER (CP) — Martin Linsley, a receiver-manager, has been appointed for Quadra Manufacturing Inc. of Trail, the province's only chainsaw maker.

Linsley, of Coopers and Lybrand, was named by court order on behalf of the Kootenay Savings Credit Union.

He said he is still talking to several parties interested in buying all or some of the plant's assets.

The Quadra plant opened in September, 1972.

Untangling Rape-Kidnap Solomon Task

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police say a judge may need the wisdom of Solomon when he presides at a joint hearing next week for a man charged with rape and the victim's husband, charged with kidnapping the alleged rapist.

"In 20 years, I've never seen a case like this one," Police Sgt. Daniel Hill said Tuesday. "We're hoping the judge, who may have to be like King Solomon, will be able to straighten this out."

The husband, Earl Patterson, 33, was released Tuesday night on $2,500 bail after being charged with kidnapping, felonious restraint, aggravated and simple assault, terroristic threatening and possession of offensive weapons.

Carl Butler, 34, was held in lieu of $5,000 bail on charges of rape, robbery, theft, assault and indecent assault.

The men will appear together next Wednesday before Common Pleas Judge Thomas Shiomos.

Patterson's wife, Maxim, 35, was robbed and raped in her driveway last January. She reported the attack to police, but they were unable to solve the case.

In October, Mrs. Patterson told her husband she saw the rapist getting off a bus in the neighborhood, and the couple began cruising the streets by car looking for him. About a week ago, Patterson bought handcuffs and a bludgeon, police said.

Patterson said his wife spotted Butler on Monday, repairing a driveway drain behind his home.

Patterson, a social worker, said he crept up behind Butler and made what he considered a citizen's arrest. But instead of taking Butler to a police station, he took him to the Patterson home and "interrogated" him for 2½ hours in the basement until he extracted a confession, police said.

By the time Patterson brought Butler to the police station, handcuffed and ready for booking, police and FBI agents had launched a search for Butler, whose wife had reported seeing him led away.

Butler repudiated the confession at the police station, saying that Patterson threatened him with a gun and held him by force.

The Bible says Solomon was known for his ability to resolve tangled disputes. Once, when asked to decide between two women who both claimed to be the mother of a baby, he proposed cutting the infant in half. When one of the women said she'd rather give up her child, Solomon declared that her love proved she was the true mother.

MARS HOOKUP SEEN

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Scientists plan to "harpoon" Mars to set up new antennae that would send back a constant flow of information about possible life and activity on the planet.

Edward A. Flinn, chief scientist for lunar and planetary programs at NASA headquarters in Washington, told of the plan Tuesday at the annual meeting of the American Geophysics Union.

"We would shoot, or drop, hard landers from orbiters, like firing anchors or harpoons, to leave the antennae on the surface," he said.

Flinn said there were also plans for a rover on Mars "that would be able to roam the surface of the planet, take pictures, do chemical analysis and give us a mobility we didn't have in the Viking missions."

The scientist said the antennae could provide "a global network of seismological activity and heat flow telling about radiation" on Mars.

A possible first indication of seisological activity, "Marsquakes," on the planet was mentioned by another prominent scientist at the meeting, Don Anderson, of the California Institute of Technology.

Bribery Charge Cuts Off Trial

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Citing "the most prejudicial type of publicity" about an alleged attempt to bribe a juror, a federal judge declared a mistrial Tuesday in the political corruption trial of Gov. Marvin Mandel and four other men.

U.S. district court judge John H. Pratt said a fair trial became impossible when jury members heard a news bulletin last Friday night about the arrest of Walter Weikers for allegedly trying to bribe a juror to assure an acquittal.

Mandel and his codefendants are charged with mail fraud and racketeering. The governor is alleged to have accepted financial interests in two business ventures in return for influencing legislation in 1972.

The jurors, who had heard three months of testimony, were watching a television movie in their hotel when the program was interrupted by news of Weiker's arrest on charges of obstructing justice. Weiker, 67, is a furniture salesman from surburban Pikesville.

"It goes without saying that publicity concerning a charge of attempted bribery, except for publicity concerning confessions of guilt, is perhaps the most prejudicial type of publicity since any juror, including a conscientious juror, would draw the inference of involvement on the part of some defendant," Pratt said in a statement.

Mandel, W. Dale Hess, William A. Rodgers, Harry. W. Rodgers III and Ernest N. Cory Jr. went on trial 13 weeks ago, charged in a 23-count mail fraud and rackeeteetring indictment.

Assistant U.S. attorney Barnet D. Skolnik asked Pratt to request the jury not to discuss the trial "in view of the necessity to try this case again."

Mandel said Pratt had "no alternative but to declare a mistrial at this late stage of my trial.

"Here we were at the point where we were just starting to present evidence in the case that would have vindicated me," he added. "We got cut off just as we got started."

CIA Agents Traced

LONDON (AP) — A foolproof method of locating U.S. CIA agents was reported Tuesday and will be used Saturday to picket the homes of about a half dozen suspected CIA men living in London.

Touted as the Child's Guide on how to find your local CIA agent, the method was explained at a news conference held by the defence committee set up to help former CIA agent Philip Agee and reporter Mark Hosenball, both facing deportation from Britain for what the British government contends are reasons of national security.

Phil Kelly, chairman of the defence committee, explained that the key to the agents' identities in the U.S. state department biographic register, which lists the names and career details of its staff.

Kelly said CIA agents can be identified from these lists by the gaps in their career details—the gaps arise because the agents get no home postings, thus leaving blank periods when they were not on active service.

When asked what would be done outside the agents' homes Saturday, Kelly replied: "We will stand there and tell people who lives there."

N-Plant Proliferation Dangerous—Gov. Evans

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP)—Gov. Dan Evans has sounded the warning: go slow on future nuclear development in Washington state.

Voters overwhelmingly rejected the Nuclear Safeguards Initiatve last month, but that in no way should be seen "as an open door to a proliferation of nuclear plants," the governor said Tuesday.

Evans said he will approve construction of twin nuclear power plants in Skagit County —pricetag, $2 billion. But he dished out words of caution, too.

The Skagit project proposed by Puget Sound Power & Light got a green light from the state because there is reliable information pointing to a need for the power, he said. Just weeks earlier, he approved construction of two nuclear power plants at Satsop.

All future proposals should be scrutinized closely, since there is a danger that the power would be unneeded, he said.

"We can build too much just as we can build too little," Evans said. "If we build too much generating capacity, we will start on another round of attempting to go out and at bargain basement prices, induce people to come in and use the surplus power we created."

Why did voters reject the Nuclear Safeguards Initiave?

"Partially, the voters were responding to $750,000 worth of advertising on one side of the issue," he said. "That's a potent political input. But even with $750,000, you can't sell a product unless you have some persuasive arguments."

U.S. Taxes Used to Export Banned Poison Pesticides

NERVE DAMAGE SPREAD FEARED

HOUSTON (UPI) — U.S. health officials are tracking down former employees of a manufacturing plant where at least 10 workers suffered nerve disorders linked to a chemical produced there.

An epidemiologist for the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health said the 10 had disorders ranging from depression to paralysis, and several other workers at the Velsicol Chemical Corp., could be involved.

"Were looking for the rest of the iceberg, if there is one," said Greg Ness, one of the epidemiologists. "I really can't say exactly how many people were affected.

"We have had calls from 38. Not all report damage. Basically they want to be reassured about their exposure."

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency was taking more samples from around the plant which had produced the pesticide phosvel since 1967, the chemical believed to have caused the nerve problems.

A spokesman said the EPA wanted to be sure none of the stored chemicals were leaking from the Bayport, Tex., plant near Galveston.

The Harris County district attorney's office said Tuesday it was planning to file pollution charges against Velsicol.

Assistant District Attorney Jim Jordan said as many as five air-pollution charges, carrying fines ranging from $10 to $1,000 each, would be filed under the Texas Clean Air Act.

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. government has been using tax money to help ship abroad hundreds of tons of pesticides so poisonous that they are not permitted to be used in the United States.

Included in these shipments of the U.S. foreign aid program were 64 metric tons of leptophos, which has been linked to nerve disorders and paralysis among workers at the Texas plant where it was manufactured.

Officials of the U.S. Agency for International Development Aid said the leptophos pesticide was shipped to Indonesia and South Vietnam between 1972 and 1975 for use on cotton crops.

At the same time, agency officials said that AID had subsidized the export of about 900 metric tons of DDT primarily for use on crops between 1972 and 1974. The use of DDT was prohibited in the United States, except in special cases as of Jan. 1, 1973.

AID agreed in December, 1975, to suspend its procurement of these and other controversial chemicals after four national environmental organizations filed suit in U.S. district court here to stop the practice.

Until then, leptophos, DDT, aldrin, heptachlor and chlordane were all included on AID's list of commodities for which U.S. government financing was available to foreign buyers. The use of those chemicals has either never been authorizd, or sharply circumscribed, by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), which sets federal standards.

Tuesday, an AID spokesman annoticed that the agency "is not financing the export of leptophos (at the present time) and doesn't expect to do so." The spokesman said the decision was based on a recent report of a five-member EPA advisory panel which recommended against its further use on food products.

Cotton is considered a food product because crushed cottonseed produces a widely used vegetable oil.

Balloon Hazard

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — More than 15 million "Blobo Plastic Bubb-A-Loon" toy balloons are being recalled because they contain Benzene, a hazardous substance, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) said Tuesday.

Benzene may cause a blood disorder if it is eaten or inhaled, the CPSC said.

The balloons, which are made in Taiwan, have been distributed since 1973 by the Imperial Toy Corp.

ROCKY ASKING $8M

WASHINGTON (WP) — The in-town Washington estate of Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller at 2500 Foxhall Rd. NW. is up for sale. The reported asking price for the 25-acre property is $8 million.

The real estate agency selling the property, William J. Yates Inc., of Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., has handled a number of real estate transactions for the family.

A spokesman in Rockefeller's office said that the property would "go on the market after inauguration day."

Other sources said that the estate already had been shown to selected prospective buyers and that Rockefeller was asking for a cash sale.

The estate was assessed by the city for tax purposes at $2.1 million for fiscal 1976, the second highest residential property assessment in Washington. The highest was the $2.9 million assessment of the John Archibold property on Reservoir Road NW.

Rockefeller bought the house in the mid-1940s after renting it for several years while he was co-ordinator of inter-American affairs in the Roosevelt administration.

Is It the Start Of Flu Spread?

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — U.S. Federal, state and local officials searched for clues of swine flu in southern Wisconsin was isolated or a possible "seeding" that could lead to a wide outbreak.

It was confirmed Tuesday that Don Harris, 23, a hired hand on a pig farm near Brodhead, Wis., had swine flue two weeks ago.

Harris said he "just happened to get sick" at the same time his animals were ailing. Officials were trying to determine the source of his infection and whether it had spread to others.

The Wisconsin Division of Health said it would set up a swine flu clinic to begin vaccinations in schools and would ask the U.S. Centre for Disease Control in Atlanta of one million doses of vaccine.

The CDC sent investigators to Wisconsin to determine if there was any evidence of person-to-person transmission of the flu.

William Schatz, head of the Wisconsin immunization program, said a number of persons in the area reported having "influenza-like symptoms."

He said blood samples from 13 recently ill residents had been sent to the CDC for analysis.

Dr. Donald Millar, co-ordinator of the national swine influenza immunization program at the CDC, said if evidence is found of person-to-person transmission, "we may be starting to see the first seeding of swine flu."

Such "seeding" of the influenza virus occurs shortly before outbreaks of the ailment.

"Additional blood specimens from the farm worker are being tested to insure that contamination did not occur in the collection or handling of the laboratory specimens," the CDC said.

The Harris case was discovered about two weeks ago when a veterinarian was called to the farm to treat sick pigs. Harris told him at that time he was not feeling well and he was advised to see a doctor.

His temperature climbed to 103.8 degrees before dropping, but he worked while ill.

Free Meat Trade Urged

WASHINGTON (CP) — A top U.S. agriculture official has called for a Canada-United States common market on livestock and red meat and while one Canadian official welcomed the idea, indications are that any formal negotiations on the subject are a long way off.

U.S. and Canadian sources said the proposal has not been brought up during current discussions of limits on U.S. beef imports and is not likely to play any significant role in those talks.

The proposal came in an Indianapolis speech by Richard Bell, U.S. assistant agriculture secretary.

Crees in Quebec to Get Land Half the Size of a Province

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will receive a chunk of land from Quebec equal to more than half the size of Prince Edward Island to meet terms of the James Bay land claims agreements, Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand announced Tuesday.

"A new legislative framework is necessary since some of the benefits granted to the Crees under the James Bay and Northern Quebec Agreement are not provided for in the present Indian Act," Allmand told the Commons.

The minister was opening debate on legislation that will give official federal approval to land claims agreements signed a year ago.

The agreement has been ratified by a vote among Cree and Eskimos in northern Quebec and approved in the Quebec legislature under former Liberal premier Robert Bourassa.

The Quebec government would be expected to turn over 1,274 square miles of land to the federal government under a separate piece of federal legislation Allmand will introduce later.

Quebec would maintain mineral rights in the area, while the Cree would have exclusive use of forest resources. It would allow the Cree to establish local government, including school oards, and administer their own land under Canadian jurisdiction.

While the federal government would administer, manage and control the parcel of land, the James Bay Cree bands would have its "exclusive use and benefit."

The land to be given to Canada is part of the 410,000 square miles of northern Quebec at stake in the James Bay agreement.

It was initially given to Quebec by Canada in 1912 with the condition the provincial government would negotiate the settlement of land claims with natives before developing it.

Those negotiations began in earnest in 1971 when Bourassa wanted to make way for a massive $16.2-billion hydro electric project.

In return for the surrender of their aboriginal claims, about 5,500 Cree and 4,200 Inuit will get from the governments $225 million — $75 million in cash, $75 million in hydro royalties and $75 million in non-transferrable Quebec government bonds during a 20-year period.

They also get ownership, through native-controlled corporations of parcels of land for their 22 communities. And they get fishing, trapping and hunting rights on a total of 58,650 square miles.

Before Allmand spoke in the Commons, the Native Council of Canada issued a statement asking the government to protect the rights of its Metis and non-status Indian members who are not included in the agreement.

The bill before Parliament would allow the federal government to include other native groups into the James Bay formula.

In its statement the Native Council said MPs should consider re-examining the agreement to determine whether all of its provisions would still be legitimate if Quebec separates from Canada.

$1 Million A Year Airline Offer

MONTREAL (CP) — TAP, the airline of Portugal, has offered $1 million a year to any airline which can operate a charter service to transport TAP's passengers between Toronto and Montreal's Mirabel International Airport.

Antonio Pinto-Santos, the airline's general manager in Canada, said Tuesday that such a charter service would handle 20,000 to 25,000 one-way flights in both directions between Toronto and Mirabel.

He said Air Canada has turned down the offer while Quebecair, which would like to operate the service, lacks landing rights at Toronto.

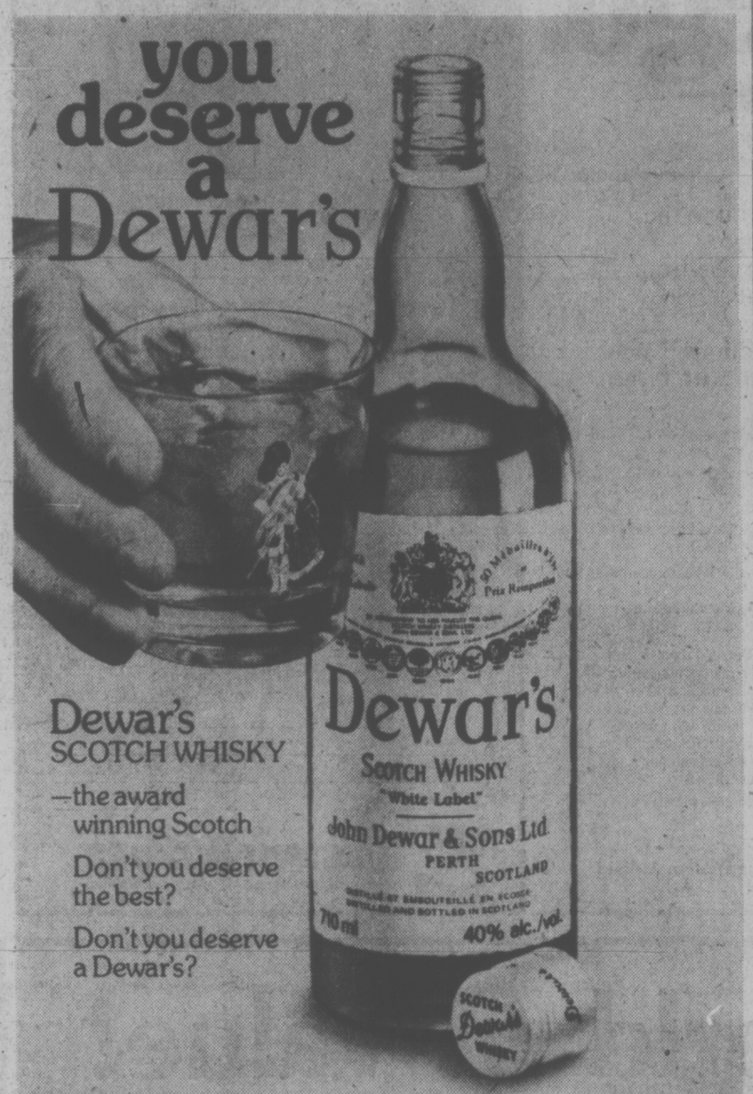

Quebecair has made an unsuccessful application to the Canadian transport commission to obtain special permission for the charter service. The decision has been appealed to Otto Lang, the federal transport minister.

Eleven foreign airlines which usé Mirabel, 35 miles north of Montreal, have no landing rights in Toronto.

Domestic flights usually use Dorval airport while Mirabel is used for international flights.

He said that while the charter airline connection would help, what the airline really needs is landing rights in Toronto.

They Trust Only Canada Post Office

OTTAWA — Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.'s Italian partner in the controversial nuclear reactor sale to Argentina will trust only the mails to provide the Canadian government with potentially-explosive information on the agents used in the Argentine deal.

According to a spokesman for Federal Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie, Italimpiante has just confirmed that it is providing the additional information requested by Canada in connection with the $2.4 million "agent's fee" paid by AECL to an unknown Liechtenstein company via a Swiss bank account.

But Italimpiante has refused government requests to provide the information either by Telex or by telephone.

The Italian civil engineering firm has said the information is in the mail and cannot be divulged by other communications means for reasons of security, the spokesman said.

The spokesman said that he didn't know when the letter is due to arrive, or even how it was sent.

As soon as it is received Energy Minister Gillespie is expected either to make it available to the Commons public accounts committee looking into the Auditor-General's questions about AECL's payments to foreign agents or to provide the information to the House of Commons if it is not practical to wait for a committee meeting the spokesman said.

Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. paid the $2.4-million to the credit of Intercontinental General Trading Establishment of Schaan, Liechtenstein, on the instructions of Italimpiante, supposedly as its share of agents fees and promotional expenses in connection with the Argentina reactor sale.

Since Italimpiante was solely responsible for arranging for any agents or promotional services, AECL claims it didn't know who it was paying or what services it was paying for.

AECL Agreement Switch Opened Door to 'Fees'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell said Tuesday that questions about how a foreign agent spent money paid as a fee in the sale of a nuclear reactor to South Korea might never have been asked if Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. had stuck with its original agreement.

Macdonell, appearing before the Commons public accounts committee, said the first agreement between the government-owned Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. and United Development Inc. of Tel Aviv called for a flat payment of $20 million to the agent.

If it had been left that way, Mr. Macdonell said the size of the payment might have attracted his attention, but if it had been properly authorized there would be little else he could do.

But he said AECL renegotiated the agreement, making part of it accountable as expenses.

As soon as that was done, the auditor wanted to see the vouchers backing up any payments.

Macdonell said that has not yet been done, but later agreed that since the agent originally did not expect to have to account for the money it was difficult to go back and do such work.

Under the new agreement, renegotiated last spring, the agent receives $5.1 million as a commission fee, up to a further $5.1 million in services during construction and the warranty period and any expenses incurred from 1972.

United was paid $8.1 million in expenses, but the auditor-general said he is still not satisfied that sufficient documentation of the spending has been provided.

Part of the expense money went to three consultants hired by United to help them in pomoting the reactor sale. They were identified as: Triangular Trading Co. of Panama, which received $1.3 million for financial and legal help; Industrie Export GMBH of Meisengasse, Germany, $514,000 for economic studies; and International Shipping and Shipbuilding Establishment of Hong Kong, $899,500 for technical comparisons of nuclear systems.

Macdonell said the whole issue reinforces the central recommendation of his report to Parliament this year, calling for the appointment of a chief financial officer for the government.

A similar recommendation was made specifically for AECL, saying its current financial management is inadequate.

The auditor-general said if such an officer had been included in the discussions on renegotiating the agreement with United, he could have pointed out that vouchers would be needed to back any payments listed as expenses.

He said he would be "amazed and astounded" if such a renegotiation in a private company was not checked with the financial officer. In the absence of a chief financial officer in AECL "I am not surprised this sort of thing could occur," he added.

This was the third sitting of the public accounts committee and little new ground was revealed yesterday with many members saying the time had

Probe Called Stall

OTTAWA (FP)—Opposition House leader Walter Baker Tuesday insisted the government stop using its newly-appointed Royal Commission to stall corrective action on its "grossly inadequate" financial management.

Instead, the Grenville-Carleton Tory told the Management Consulting Institute at the Skyline Hotel here, the prime minister should follow the recent advice of Auditor-General J. J. Macdonnell and appoint a comptroller-general of Canada.

"Surely it would not be difficult to work out the terms of reference for the comptroller and the financial officers and eliminate any anticipated problems in advance," Baker contended.

The solutions to government spending mismanagement proposed by the auditor-general are "sound and logical" he said, and promised the Conservative party would implement them if it forms a government.

Baker described the Royal Commission as "a patent attempt" to forestall any criticisms the auditor-general might make before the public accounts committee, or in next year's report.

"It is also designed—just in case the same diagnosis is made again—to delay further serious criticism or action until after the next federal election," he continued.

Baker explained the recommended comptroller-general position, now being rejected by the government, would be similar to that of the comptroller of a company. The comptroller would report to the president of the treasury board, not the House of Commons.

ARREST URGED

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A federal judge has asked the U.S. government to arrest and extradite a former Argentine economy minister now living in Washington, legal sources said Tuesday.

They said the request involves Jose Gelbard, who served as economy minister in 1973 and 1974.

Last week the Buenos Aires newspaper La Razon said Gelbard and another former Peronist minister, Adolfo Savino, had acted as agents in Argentina's purchase of a Candu nuclear reactor from Canada. That transaction is being investigated by the Canadian auditor-general because of an alleged $2.4-million sales commission.

Gelbard denied in Washington that he had negotiated the reactor contract.

Restraint Bill Gets Nod

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons gave approval in principle Tuesday evening to a long-debated government bill that enacts a series of measures, most of them already in effect, to restrain government spending.

Debate over the restraint bill, a hang-over from the last session of Parliament, occupied much of the Common's time during the past six weeks.

The bill was first introduced a year ago but died on the order paper when the previous session ended in October.

It was reintroduced early in the current session and debate started Nov. 5.

It now goes to committee for study.

FOR POSTERITY . . .

MONTREAL (CP) — The Olympic organizing committee has announced its choice of the official poster "that will historically represent" the games — it depicts a scene that may never be.

The winning poster, among 35 published, shows the Olympic Stadium with a 550-foot tower and retractable roof, which the Quebec government has announced it may cancel to save $200 million.

Gerald Snyder, vice-president of revenue for the committee, said the official poster selection was made Nov. 26, just two days before the government announced its intention to reconsider completion of the stadium.

"It doesn't bother us in the least that the tower may not go up," Snyder said. "We based our selection on the best poster."

Lifer Makes Plea For Prison Jobs

STE. ANNE DES PLAINES, Que. (CP) — Billy McAllister told MPs Tuesday that federal prisoners need work that would enable them to repay victims of their crimes and support their own families.

McAllister, a lifer, described life in Archambault, a maximum-security prison in this rural area 30 miles north of Montreal.

The west-end Montreal gangster, imprisoned several years ago after a Brink's robbery in which a guard was killed, organized an epic 110-day strike this year that resulted in prisoners getting 70 of 71 demands met. The last demand is still being negotiated.

Archambault Warden Jean-Paul Lebrun told 10 MPs on a special Commons subcommittee into prison violence that not only the administration but the prisoners were changed by the unprecedented peaceful strike, in which prisoners refused to work, giving up pay and privileges.

Lebrun said the results of the strike is better communication, an end to sabotage, and more positive relationships.

Archambault, despite a large number of armed robbers among its 425 prisoners, has had only one successful escape since it opened six years ago, no riots, and one brief hostage-taking last spring.

McAllister, leader of a 15-member prisoners committee, said the non-violent test of wills had been successful but prison was still "life without hope" for many.

John Reynolds (Progressive Conservative MP for Burnaby-Delta-Richmond) had asked what more politicians could do without risking the rapes and killings that had taken place occasionally when prisoners elsewhere were given limited freedom.

McAllister snapped back that the politicians were trying to convince the public that "we're all sadistic maniacs out to rape and kill."

All the politicians seemed to offer was more prisons. The need was programs that did someone some good.

McAllister gave as an example the Swedish prison system and said prisoners should be able to do socially-useful work that would compensate victims and keep their families off welfare.

Parliament, he said, had spent $276,000 on a study of the Swedish system but the recommendations had been shelved.

McAllister said men without challenge emerge after long sentences either destroyed or "a walking time bomb."

FIRE DELAYS MP VISIT

STE. ANNE DES PLAINES, Que. (CP) — A fire set in the workshop at Archambault institution, a maximum-security prison 30 miles north of Montreal, interrupted a tour of the prison by 10 politicians on Tuesday.

The fire — which was set by prisoners — sent smoke pouring through the ventilation system and forced evaculation of the warehouse-like workshop but did little other damage.

Ten members of Parliament, members of a special Commons subcommittee seeking solutions to prison violence, were touring the institution at the time of the fire.

Archambault, with 425 prisoners, has had only one successful escape since it opened six years ago, no riots, and one brief hostage-taking last spring.

Provinces Blast Bank Law

OTTAWA (CP) — The 10 released a nine-page brief Tuesday criticizing several key recommendations in proposed new banking legislation expected to be introduced in Parliament in February.

The ministers especially objected to a recommendation which would force near-banks —credit unions and trust companies—to place reserves in the Bank of Canada as existing charter banks do.

They rejected the view that this would give the federal government greater control over money supply policies. The brief added that provincial laws already protect depositors against the bankruptcy of these institutions, so this cannot be regarded as a reason for forcing them to keep reserves with the central bank.

The provinces agreed with the principle of allowing the establishment of more new banks but anticipated such a move would affect the marketplace only marginally.

"Moreover, many small new banks may make the banking system less manageable and more fragile and reduce the flexibility of monetary tools."

ECM Action Demanded By Canada

LONDON (FP) — The European Common Market is to be told that it is time some results were produced to justify the contractual link with Canada, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Tuesday.

"Eighteen months have gone by since the framework agreement on co-operation was agreed upon and there's not much in the way of a tangible result," Jamieson told a press conference.

"If things don't start to happen, Canadian businessmen will begin to think it's been a nice exercise but not much else. 1977 will be the year in which the European countries are going to have to demonstrate that they are doing something to make this agreement mean something."

QUEBEC FEAR DRYING UP FUNDS

NEW YORK (CP) — Premier Frank Moores of Newfoundland said Tuesday that uncertainty over Quebec is hurting investor confidence in Canada and Canadian leaders must deal with the situation "head on and immediately."

Moores, guest speaker at a dinner given in his honor by the Canadian Society of New York, devoted a major part of his speech to Quebec's new Parti Quebecois government under Premier Rene Levesque.

In the context of the need of a stable Canada to attract investors, Moores told a cross-section of the business community here he had been approached several times during his New York visit and particularly questioned about the Nov. 15 Quebec election.

"I, personally, am very concerned that the results of the Quebec election are being misinterpreted, particularly internationally," Moores said.

City Litter Blitz Proposed by Wright

The city of Victoria and the business community should join forces in a blitz on the litter problem on downtown Victoria's streets and sidewalks, Ald. Bob Wright suggested Tuesday.

Wright, chairman of the city's central business district advisory committee, promised business representatives at the monthly meeting that a priority task will be to design new litter bins that are more prominent and easily distinguishable.

Architect Alan Lester had complained that the present receptacles often aren't noticed because they "blend in" with the general street scene.

Another committee member noted that one of the biggest problems occurs at bus stops, where bins tend to overflow. Any merchant with a bus stop in front of his premises becomes upset because he knows the sidewalk will be "littered with people," he said.

Wright said the city will write to B.C. Hydro, suggesting the transit authority patrol this problem.

Alan Emery, president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, wanted to know when the bylaw was last enforced requiring store owners to clean the sidewalk outside their premises. No one had the answer.

Lester quipped that a suitable name for a campaign promoting use of litter bins might be "Stuff It."

Business Vote Called Dismal

Representatives of Victoria's business community were castigated Tuesday by Ald. Bob Wright for what he called their "dismal" lack of interest in last month's civic election.

Wright told the monthly meeting of city council's downtown advisory group that he had been doing some of his own digging in an effort to explain the poor 18.8 per cent voter turnout at the 1976 election.

In checking with the city comptroller and the licence inspector he found there are about 5,000 business licences issued in the city, and of these about 3,000 are businesses only as opposed to apartments and other fringe commercial activities.

Out of this total some 1,500 are limited companies owning land and therefore eligible to vote last month, under a recent change to the Municipal Act reintroducing the corporate vote.

But Wright said he found that only 26 companies registered to vote, and of that total only 15 actually voted.

It was not a brilliant record for "this last bastion of free enterprise," he said.

Wright urged business leaders to do everything possible to instill greater interest in civic affairs among the business community before next November's civic election, when all nine council seats become vacant under the switch to biennial elections.

Alan Emery, president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, reacted defensively to the criticism by suggesting to Wright that much of the fault lay in the candidates themselves and their uninspiring approach.

"Every single candidate in the entire municipal election process for the whole area said exactly the same thing," he claimed.

"How can the poor public, the business public or private public, draw any distinction? Everyone had the same ad. I am suggesting to you politicians that you haven't really given us much to choose from."

But Young retorted that a one per cent turnout of the business community at the polls couldn't be explained away by such "lamebrain excuses."

If there was a lacklustre campaign, he added sarcastically, "it certainly wasn't for want of trying on Ald. McKenzie's part."

FIRST CHINESE DISAPPEARED

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

British Columbia's first immigants were Chinese, but mystery surrounds their disappearance from the west coast, Dr. Jacque Mar, of Nanaimo, told members of the Victoria Branch of the B.C. Historical Society Tuesday.

Mar said British navigator John Meares brought 30 settlers from China in 1786 to establish a post and community at Nootka Sound, where he had purchased land from the native band.

The following year, an additional 70 Chinese workers were brought to Vancouver Island and helped build and launch the 40-ton North West America, the first ship built on the coast.

But in 1789, the Spaniards, who claimed the whole region, seized the post and all of Meares' possessions.

Mar related that when Capt. George Vancouver later sailed from England to reclaim Nootka Sound, he was also instructed to rescue the Chinese settlers.

He thinks some may have been taken to Mexico by the Spaniards to work the mines while others may have been assimilated by the native people.

Mar spoke on the achievements of the early Chinese settlers and the racial tensions that existed between Orientals and occidentals during the formative years of the province.

He recalled they help build the Caribou Road, the Dewdney Trail and the railway through the Rockies to the coast.

"They actually bailed out the CPR with their sinews and muscles when the company was in financial difficulties and in danger of bankruptcy," he said.

But as Mar pointed out when he famous photograph wsa taken showing the last spike been driven to complete the realroad, "no Chinese faces are to be seen in the picture."

POSTER WINS TOP PRIZE

OTTAWA — Dale Hitchcox, 18, a part-time student in graphic arts from Victoria today received a $1,000 cheque from Manpower and Immigration Minister Bud Cullen for a winning poster design.

His design won the department's national-poster contest on the theme of "Hire a Student."

He has been studying graphic arts at Camosun College, since the fall. When he completes his course he will pursue a career in graphic arts.

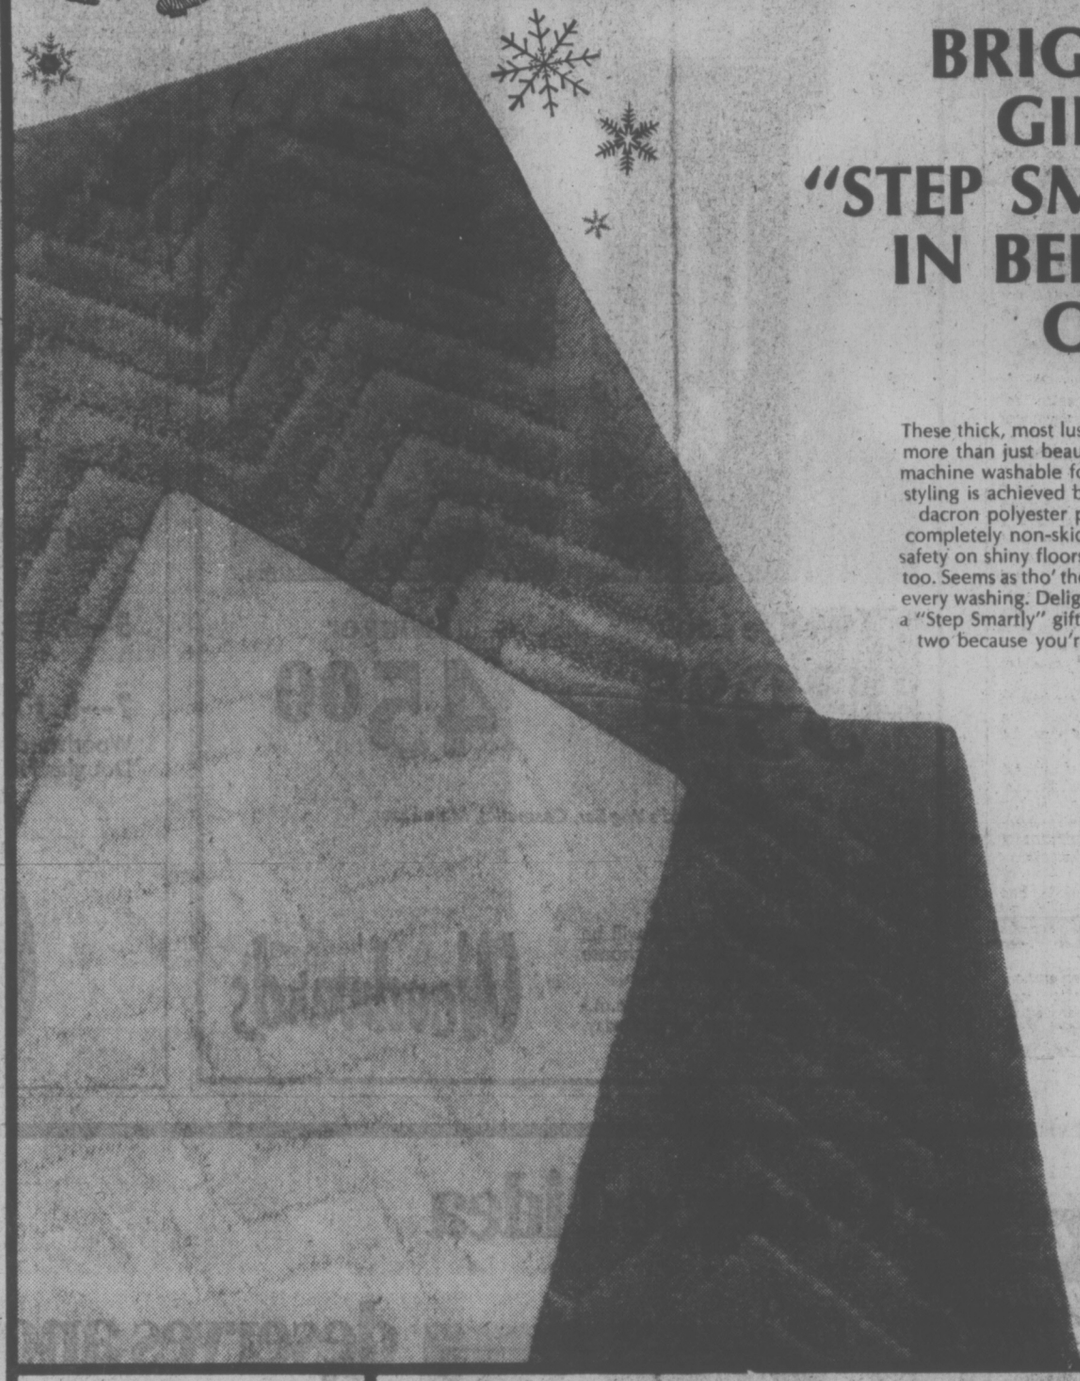

"This is the best thing that has ever happened to me," said Hitchcox. He had been looking for a source of income to pay for his future studies.

The contest was announced last June and students were asked to submit designs to encourage employers to hire more students.

More than 650 submissions were received. A preliminary selection was undertaken at the regional level and each of the department's five regions sent their five best posters.

Range of Hobby Dangers Terrifying

LONDON (Reuter) — Doctors, who often advise patients to take up a hobby to relax, are looking more closely at hobbies as possible sources of patients' complaints.

The weekly medical journal General Practitioners, says doctors should be asking: "What are your hobbies?"

The increasing technological complexity of modern hobbies is putting many creative users of leisure at risk.

People who do their own car maintenance, building, woodwork, painting or decorating suffer the same "industrial diseases" as those doing these jobs for a living.

Asbestos dust may cause fatal lung diseases. Oil-soaked overalls may produce cancer of the scrotum.

The key difference between the amateur and the professional running such risks, General Practitioner notes, is that "if the amateur does contract any of the industrial diseases that would entitle a professional to industrial injuries benefit, he will receive nothing because the disease was not contracted as a result of his employment."

Sculptors may suffer silicosis, a lung disease also known as potter's rot, while firing statues and pots. Amateur potters also run a risk of absorbing lead contained in the glaze.

General Practitioner blames premature deafness in teenagers on noisy discotheques, where the noise level is higher than the industrial limit of 90 decibels during an eight-hour shift.

Apparently there is no escape. Book-collectors, not subject to machinery, animals, or noise, may suffer a variety of the "curse of the pharaohs."

Those who first explored the pyramids were killed by what was thought to be a curse but was actually the spores in ancient dust. Less deadly forms of this syndrome may be contracted through undisturbed dusty, such as the disorders suffered by librarians handling very old volumes.

Having compiled this terrifying list, accompanied by gruesome pictures of rashes, sores, ulcers, lesions and asbestos-laden internal tissues, the journal does not bother to warn those seeking relaxation through sky-diving, hang-gliding, skin-diving and mountaineering.

LEFTISTS PICKET MILAN'S OPERA

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Thousands of police cordoned off the heart of Milan and battled militant leftists to prevent disruption of the televised opening of the opera season at Milan's famous La Scala theatre.

Rich patrons who paid $84 to $168 a seat left their limousines at home, covered their jewels and took taxis. They crossed through lines of 2,500 riot police who kept marching groups of extremists well away from the opera house Tuesday night.

The leftists were protesting the opera opening as a display of wealth at a time when Italy's poor are feeling the pinch of an acute economic crisis.

Outside the police cordon, hundreds of demonstrators in small groups broke shop windows, traffic lights and telephone booths, hurled fire bombs at cars and trolleys, overturned automobiles and fought with police.

The police said 20 leftists and several policemen were injured. About 200 demonstrators were taken into custody, and 40 were charged with disorderly conduct or assaulting policemen.

The four-hour performance of Verdi's Otello, starring Placido Domingo, Mirella Freni and Piero Capuccilli, was undisturbed except for the presence of the television cameras. It was the first live telecast of a Scala opening.

Squatters Leave As Police Prod

CULIACAN, Mexico (AP) — Sinaloa state police supervised the withdrawal of peasant invaders from private farms Tuesday, but landowners reported resistance from several groups of squatters.

Reports from state officials and landowners indicated that about 20 of 80 peasant groups have suspended their demonstration in the northern half of the state.

"The peaceful withdrawal began today without any violent incidents," said Sergio Herreray Cairo, assistant attorney-general and chief of state security forces.

He said his policemen would continue to move peasants off the land today and warned that squatters who move back onto private farms would face "more drastic action."

Two farmers, Javier Blancarte and Marcelo Lopez Gomez, said that several groups of peasants entered their property in the Guasave valley Tuesday and seized five tractors.

Between 3,000 and 9,000 landless peasants occupied about 100,000 acres on private estates last week, demanding that the government give them land. They say that the owners are violating the constitutional provision which limits individual landholdings to 250 acres. The occupation nearly paralysed work on the rich vegetable and grain farms in the Guasave, El Fuerte and El Carrizo valleys.

The peasants' leaders agreed to suspend the occupation by today after the state government warned that the squatters would be removed forcibly. The peasants' leaders said they would wait for a court ruling, expected today, on a petition by the landowners asking that the invasion be declared illegal.

Gov. Alfonso Calderon and several peasant leaders went to Mexico City Tuesday night to discuss the situation with Jorge Rojo Lugo, the new federal secretary of agrarian reform.

HE JUST SHOWED UP TO SAY GOODBYE!

WILLIAMS LAKE — Merle McDonald, a carpenter foreman at Hydro's site 1 Peace River power development, spent about five minutes at work.

"He just showed up, said goodbye and then took off," said a co-worker Tuesday.

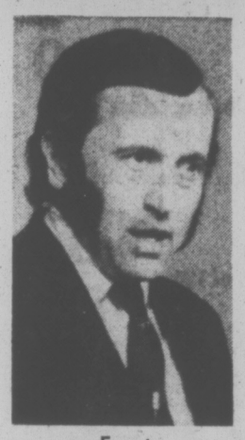

McDonald had just found out that he was $1 million richer as a result of Sunday's Loto Canada draw.

He apparently returned to his home here, but cannot be located.

Top U.S. Award For Canadian

OTTAWA — John I. Nicol, director-general of Parks Canada, was presented with the Conservation Service Award in Washington Tuesday. He is the first Canadian ever to receive the U.S. department of the interior's highest civilian award. The award was presented by Thomas Kleppe, secretary of the interior, in recognition of Nicol's "accomplishments and dynamic leadership in stimulating close relationships between Canada and the United States in the field of national park management."

SAN DIEGO — Actress Katherine Hepburn is performing in A Matter of Gravity this week while sitting in a wheelchair. The veteran stage and screen actress is unable to stand because of a broken ankle suffered last month in a fall at her Hollywood Hills home.

LOS ANGELES — Former U.S. president Richard Nixon has come to terms with the Watergate scandal and "wants to confront his past" in public, says entertainer David Frost, who will do a series of TV interviews with Nixon. "I think that Richard Nixon wants to confront his past, to give his version, to be candid," Frost said in a speech Tuesday to the Hollywood Radio and Television Society. "I think it's up to us to press him to go further." Frost said he will begin taping at Nixon's San Clemente estate next March and will conclude in April. "I have sole control of the content," said Frost, "and Mr. Nixon has no right to know any questions in advance or to view the shows before they are aired."

Hepburn

OAKLAND, Calif. — An Alameda County courtroom erupted into violence Tuesday when William and Emily Harris refused to sit through an arraignment hearing on charges of kidnapping Patricia Hearst. It took several deputies several minutes to subdue the former Symbionese Liberation Army members after Emily Harris denounced Judge Alan Lindsay as one of "a dying breed playing with people's lives . . ." The Harrises were wrestled to the floor kicking and fighting. Harris was slammed against the wall and his glasses flew off, while his wife was handcuffed.

LONDON — Labor MP Tom Swain, a former professional boxer, grabbed an opposition Conservative by the collar in Britain's House of Commons today and told him: "I'll punch your bloody head in." Other members led the furious Swain away from the man he threatened. Swain first complained to the Speaker that he had risen 10 times without being called to speak. Members have to "catch the Speaker's eye" and are then allowed to speak, according to custom. Suddenly, apparently in response to some comment from right-wing Conservative Norman Tebbit, Swain warned: "If you say that outside, I'll punch your bloody head in." No comment by Tebbit was reported.

PINOCCHIO NOSED OUT

TOKYO — A group of Japanese maintain that the story of Pinocchio should be kept out of children's minds. They also say the story of a lame fox leading a blind cat should not be told to children because it encourages discrimination against the handicapped.

Tomiko Yakata, president of Aichi Prefectural Labor Federation and a co-leader of the group, says:

"Pinocchio is a story about the poor, ill-clothed and mean people. Why should the state of affairs that existed in mid-19th century Italy when capitalism was raising its head be told to children?

"Don't people realize how dangerous it is to put the idea into children's minds that the lame and the blind can live only by begging or by deceiving people and that they are pitiful nuisances."

Three Tokyo publishing houses have bowed to the group's pressure and are recalling their Pinocchio books, which contain the illustrations of the blind cat and the lame fox, published in the original Italian version.

Services Get Nod

OTTUMWA, Iowa — Steve Welker says the congregation of the Ottumwa Trinity Episcopal Church can still attend services. That was considerate, since the church is his private property now.

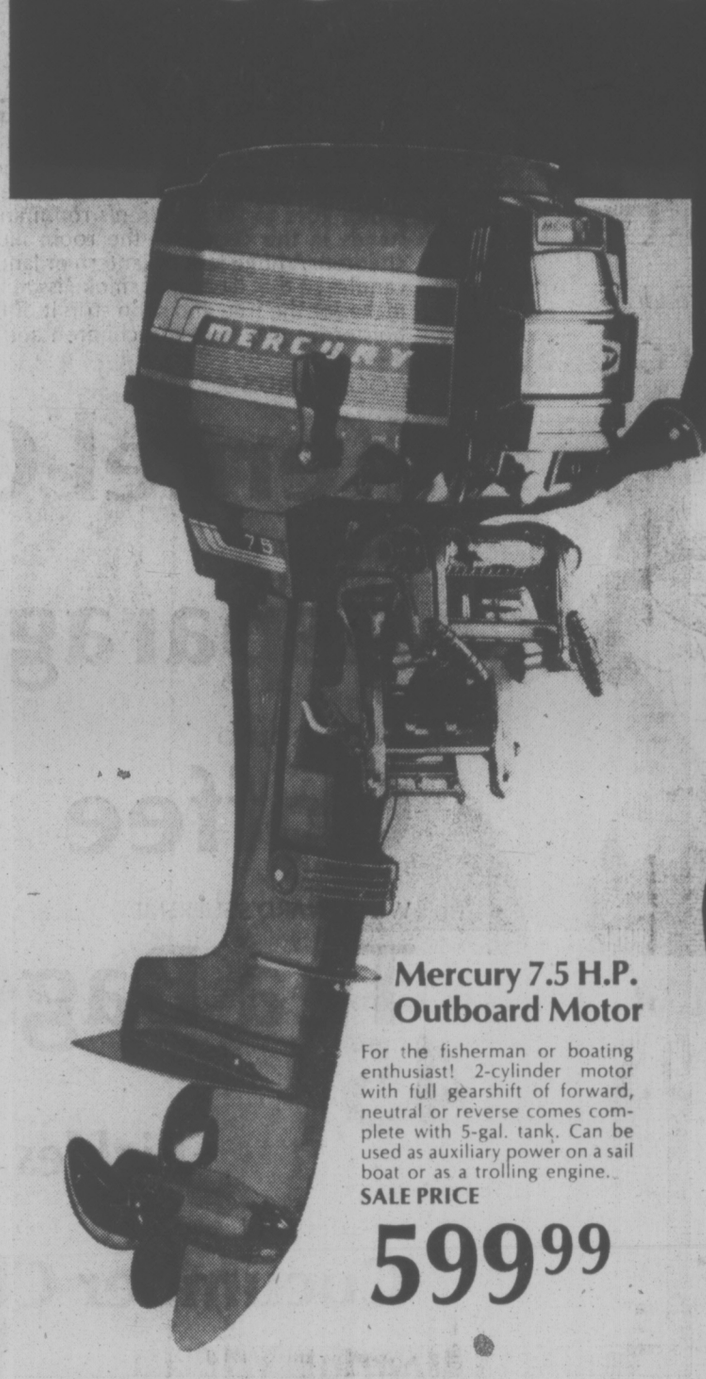

"All I wanted was a little house," said the Welker, 27, city editor of the Ottumwa Courier.

"But I didn't want the church, too. Do you realize I net maybe $10,000 a year in income?"

The mistake occurred when Welker bought the church rectory for $13,500.

A clerical error in the deed gave him title not only to the house but also to the $500,000 church next door and a vacant lot.

Woodward's Traditional Christmas

A Christmas Tradition of Germany

An old man, with a little drum attached to his neck and resting on his stomach, leads a procession around the house after the Christmas dinner. He marches into each room to frighten away any witches and to prevent them from returning the following year. Finally the group goes to the children's room and opens it with great pomp. A large Christmas tree stands in the centre of the room illuminated with candles and laden with gifts for the children. A huge Jack o' Lantern or Janus head is placed in the centre of the tree, lighted with candles so that flame and smoke issue from its nose, eyes, ears and mouth. Then the children make for the tree and soon strip it of the gifts. The older members of the family join in the boisterous play with the children and also exchange gifts.

U.S. Economist 'Stupid, Boring'

By DAVID MACDONALD
Times London Bureau

LONDON — Britain's hard-nosed chancellor of the exchequer, Denis Healey, implied yesterday that Nobel-prize-winning economist Milton Friedman of Chicago is "a stupid, boring fellow."

Wagging his beetling brows over a steely grin, Healey told a group of foreign correspondents that "the New York Jewish intellectual mafia" in which he had many friends, had a word that closely described people like Friedman.

"They say such a person is a pudnik, which is their version of an Israeli word nudnik, meaning a stupid, boring fellow."

The chancellor looked as friendly as a sabre-toothed tiger as he discussed the famous monetarist who makes almost nightly appearances on British television saying all Britain's problems could be solved by draconian measures that would drop the country's standard of living back to the pre-industrial era.

Friedman recommends the abolition of the entire British social security system, mass firings of civil servants, a return to private medicine for all, the banning of all wage and price controls and immediate stoppage for all government deficit spending. He also recommends a total halt in growth of the money supply.

Healey said the popular view of Britain overseas is of "a Roman orgy of fiscal profligacy throwing out social benefits to all and sundry without regard to cost.

"The reality is very different. Our public sector borrowing requirement and general deficits look dreadful by comparison because we lump in many things that other Western countries do not. Last year, we spent less of our national wealth on social security than did the United States.

"In fact, we spent less on social security than did all our European Economic Community partners but we do plead guilty to having spent a larger proportion of our national wealth on defence than any other country in the Western world."

He said Britain's record of days lost per 1,000 workers between 1970 and 1974 "is better than Italy, Canada, the United Statues and Australia.

"Last year, 98 per cent of British factories did not have any strike at all. I don't say Britain has no problems, just that there is no need to make these problems look larger than they are. And there is not much to be gained by listening to the magic instant solutions of such people as Milton Friedman."

HOW TO FIX A WHITE ELEPHANT

It sounds like it should be big and white and wild. But strangely, a White Elephant is short and white and smooth. So smooth, and so delicious, in fact, that you'll hardly know that it has 2 oz. of liquor in it. Like all elephants, a White Elephant should always be treated with respect.

Here's all you do to mix a White Elephant: pour 1 oz. Smirnoff, 1 oz. white creme de cacao and 1 oz. milk into a short glass with ice. Stir. And enjoy the little alabaster behemoth.

Vegetarian Recipes For the Holidays

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Holiday feasting may present problems for vegetarians, or more likely, for those who have vegetarians coming to dinner.

But there really is no need for a problem. With a few slight changes, a traditional holiday meal can be enjoyed by vegetarians and non-vegetarians alike. The non-meat eaters simply avoid the turkey.

BAKED ACORN SQUASH
(Serves 12)

6 Acorn squash
¾ cup honey
4 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup walnuts
Butter

Scrub and halve the squash lengthwise; remove seeds. Combine the honey, lemon juice and walnuts and spoon mixture into squash halves; dot with butter and place in shallow baking dish with ½ inch hot water in the bottom. Cover and bake at 400 degrees for one hour. Remove cover after 30 minutes.

BULGUR PILAF WITH PINE NUTS
(Serves 12)

4 tablespoons butter
½ cup chopped onion
4 cloves garlic, minced
4 cups bulgur (cracked wheat)
4 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 teaspoon oregano
8 cups vegetable bouillon or stock
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup pine nuts.

Saute onion and garlic in hot butter in skillet until onion is transparent. Add the bulgur and stir well. Add parsley and oregano and saute for five minutes, stirring once or twice. Add bouillon.

(At this point the dish may be refrigerated, if desired. Before cooking, return to room temperature.) Bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 45 minutes, until heated through. Just before serving, sprinkle with pine nuts.

APPLE BRAN WHOLE WHEAT ROLLS

2 cups whole wheat flour
1½ cups wheat bran
1⅛ teaspoon salt
1¼ teaspoons baking soda
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
1 cup chopped apple
½ cup raisins
½ cup sunflower seeds
Juice of 1 orange
Scant 2 cups buttermilk or sour milk
1 beaten egg
½ cup blackstrap molasses
2 tablespoons oil

Toss flour, bran, salt, soda and nutmeg together with fork. Stir in orange rind, apple, raisins and seeds. Pour orange into a two-cup measure and add buttermilk to make two cups. Add egg, molasses and oil and stir thoroughly. Stir liquid ingredients into dry ingredients with a few swift strokes. Pour into greased muffin tins, filling them two-thirds full and bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes.

This Christmas tree is a table centre and dessert, too

So Easy a Child Can Make It

Mary Moore

This is for the children. —an edible Christmas tree that you can use for a table centre — then eat for dessert.

It is simple to make and I believe your smart 10 to 12-year-olds can do it themselves.

Incidentally, when I made it I left it out on the kitchen table when we were taping a TV show and the cameraman focussed on it and it kshowed up so bright in color I gave the recipe in the show.

Remember to follow the recipe to the letter and to tell the children this, too.

EDIBLE CHRISTMAS TREE

3 tbsp. margarine
½ c. corn syrup
1 tsp. green food coloring
3 tbsp. granulated sugar
3½ c. corn flakes (exact measure)
1 box Smarties
silver "sprinkles"

Into a medium-large saucepan measure the margarine, corn syrup, green food coloring and sugar. Stir well and bring to boil, stirring, then reduce heat to gentle boil for five minutes, stirring about once every minute. Remove from heat and gently stir in corn flakes until all are coated green. Have ready a well-buttered double sheet of heavy wax paper or foil on a 13-by-9-inch cookie sheet. Tip the mixture on to the middle of it. With well-buttered fingers shape into an elongated triangle, extending some edges to look like protruding banches of Christmas tree. Surface should not be smooth. It should look rough with little indentations in it.

At once begin placing red, yellow, pink Smarties near top tip and tips of branches and through centre to look like Christmas tree decoration balls. (I used 15.) Quickly sprinkle silver "sprinkles" sparingly all over and press them in a little to be sure they hold, without flattening tree.

At bottom insert a 4-by-1-inch chocolate bar to represent trunk.

Mine is now four days old and is still crisp and lovely, so if you or the children make one it may be made two or three days before your Christmas party. Presto, you have table centre and dessert all in one.

Uncooked Apple Chutney

3 green cooking apples
½ cup lime juice
3 stalks celery finely chopped
2 tbsp. preserved ginger
1 tbsp. chopped chives
1 tbsp. chili sauce
½ cup raisins, chopped
¼ cup honey.

Wash, core and finely chop the apples and add lime juice immediately. Add remaining ingredients and chill before serving. Will keep in refrigerator up to 2 weeks. Makes about 4 cups.

Know Pros, Cons Before Buying Beef

Bulk buying of beef is a popular way to purchase meat, but you need to know some of the pros and cons before you buy. You have several alternatives: To buy a side, to buy a front or a hind quarter, to buy wholesale cuts, or to buy retail cuts.

When buying a side or quarter, be prepared to use all cuts, from steak to stewing beef. If your family will eat only tender cuts, there's no point in purchasing a front quarter. However, less tender cuts can be just as tasty as more expensive cuts if cooked properly.

Bulk beef is normally sold on a hanging weight basis — before the meat is cut and the bone and the fat trimmed. There will be approximately 25 per cent trimmed as bones and fat from a side. For example, if you buy a 300-pound side of beef, only about 225 pounds of meat will go into your freezer. The actual price per pound is therefore higher than the quoted sale price. If the sale price was 90 cents per pounds, the price you pay for the actual meat would be $1.20 per pound.

A front quarter has a higher proportion of less tender cuts than a hind quarter. Hence, a front quarter may sell for less per pound than a side, and a hind quarter may sell for more per pound than a side. The largest percentage of a front quarter is made up of pot roasts, stewing and ground meat, with a small amount of tender rib steaks and roasts. The hind quarter has a larger percentage of tender steaks such as sirloin and porterhouse and moderately tender roasts such as rump, round and sirloin tip, and some stewing and ground meat. If you're not interested in all the cuts from a side or quarter, then consider buying a wholesale cut such as the loin, hip or chuck.

Aways check to see if the price of cutting, wrapping and quick-freezing is included. Quick-freezing ensures quality and safety. Otherwise, make sure you have adequate space in your home freezer to do so. You should not plan to freeze more than 50 pounds of meat in a 16 cubic foot freezer in a 24-hour period. If roasts and steaks are wrapped in airtight packages they can be stores at —18 degrees (0 degrees F) for 10 to 12 months. Ground beef may be kept two to three months.

Send for the Agriculture Canada folder "Beef Cuts." It contains a handy chart giving the approximate yield from a Canada A1 or B1 side. For your free copy, write to Information Division, Agriculture Canada, Ottawa, Ont. K1A 0C7.

The Avocado Loaf Cake Is A Cold-Weather Gift Idea

Cold weather brings a myriad of good things with it.

In addition to the usual occurrences — colored leaves and holidays — this winter is bringing with it a bumper crop of avocados from California.

Avocado puree combined with chicken broth makes an elegant but low-cost chilled soup for a company dinner;

Guacamole — a mixture of mashed avocado, lemon juice and seasoned salt — can be an appetizer for that holiday cocktail party when served with carrot and celery sticks.

And, if you're one who looks for the unusual, an avocado loaf cake is a bake-able goodie suited for gift-giving.

If you're by nature a skeptic, it might help to know that this brown cake with flecks of avocado green throughout tastes much like a fruit-nut cake. It has an extra-velvety texture along with added moistness from the avocado while the flour, eggs, shortening, sugar vanilla, cinnamon, raisins and walnuts hold their own in flavor.

This recipe makes two cakes. While you're graciously handing one "wrapped-and-ribboned" loaf to your friend, you and your family can enjoy the other for your own dessert.

AVOCADO LOAF CAKE

- ¾ cup shortening, creamed
- 2 cups sugar
- 3 eggs
- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 3 teaspoons cinnamon
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ¾ teaspoon allspice
- 2 teaspoons vanilla
- 1½ teaspoons baking soda
- 1½ cups pureed California avocado (2 average)
- ¾ cup buttermilk
- ½ cup chopped walnuts
- ¾ cup raisins
- Corn Syrup (optional)
- ½ cup chopped walnuts (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Add sugar slowly to shortening until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each one. Sift dry ingredients together. Fold into egg-sugar mixture. Add pureed avocado and buttermilk. Add fruit and nuts. Grease and flour two 8½"x4½"x2⅝" loaf pans. Pour in batter. Bake for 60-65 minutes. (Cake freezes well.) Before serving brush top with corn syrup and additional walnuts. Place under broiler until bubbly.

GUACAMOLE

- 4 avocados, mashed or pureed
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 tablespoons lime juice
- ⅛ teaspoon Tabasco
- ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 2 cloves garlic, crushed

Combine all ingredients. Cover and chill. Makes about three cups.

AVACADO SOUP WITH GARLIC

- 3 avocados
- 1½ cups chicken broth
- 2 teaspoons lime juice
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 small clove garlic, crushed
- 1½ cups heavy cream
- Garniture, given below

Puree avocados with a little broth, lime juice, salt and garlic. Combine with remaining broth and cream. Chill thoroughly. Garnish with lemon slices or with whipped cream, seasoned with a dash of garlic powder. Six to eight servings.

Avocado loaf cake makes an inexpensive gift

The Older Cook Deserves an Assist

hilda beastall

There seems little printed assistance in meal preparation and recipes for older people who feel responsible for maintaining their health by sensible food habits. It is taken for granted that government medical plans and prescription drugs will take care of everything.

Yet there is a minority group between 70 and 85 years still independently preparing and cooking good food for themselves as they have done all their lives.

I know one who makes a new kind of bread once every month and a regular batch of wholewheat each week. Another grows two new kinds of vegetables each year for trying out different ways of using them in his meals through the season.

This kind of interest must be more widespread than is thought, for I cannot believe they are isolated cases. These stalwarts belong to the age group which felt responsible for maintaining their own health and that of their families in a depression and shortages of two wars.

These people know they require less quantities of food even though still active 10 to 12 hours daily. Some of us in this age group say that not only does it take us longer to do all the familiar things, but it takes less to keep us occupied all day. We know from general reading that reduction of sugar and refined starchy foods is desirable in maintaining a reasonable weight level.

But few recipes are geared especially for the over 70s. We need the same good food as everyone else. The main difference is in quantity, certainly not in quality. Indeed, because of lesser quantity, every mouthful must be of highest quality.

An important angle is that of food preparation. Large mixings of bread dough, for instance, are impossible for some of us to handle so that recipes for smaller batches are needed. In breadmaking, quantities are not always merely halved for half the quantity of finished product.

So here is one favorite bread recipe which will just as easily turn into flat buns for single servings of bread for breakfast, lunch or supper.

The men will enjoy making this. How many women commercial bakers have you seen? Its time more men took up the manly art again in the home.

In Quick Batter Bread there is a total of 3½ cups flour, easy to handle. Follow directions closely if this is your first breadmaking. Warm place for rising, between 28 and 33 deg. C. may be in warming oven, with pilot light; near hot water tank; or on shelf over range. Cover with pliofilm or foil and clean towel. Have bowls room-warm to begin.

Measure warm water into large warm mixing bowl. Warm is warmer than tepid, but not hot. Add 1 tsp sugar, stir to dissolve.

Sprinkle dry yeast on surface. Let stand 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, measure hot water into small bowl; add margarine, 1 tbsp sugar, and salt. Mix to melt margarine, then stir in milk powder. (This is added protein and minerals.)

When cooled to about same warmth as yeast mixture, add milk mixture to yeast mixture in large bowl. Beat in egg with wooden spoon which is easier to handle than a sharper edged metal spoon.

Now add half the mixed but unsifted flours, beating well until smooth. Add second flour portion, beating until soft and fairly smooth. Dough will be like a heavy batter.

Well grease two small loaf pans (7½ by 3½ inch) and eight large muffin pans; or two round one-quart casseroles may suit your needs.

Spread batter until pans are two-thirds filled. Cover with foil and dish towel and place in warm place to rise until double in bulk, 50 to 60 minutes.

Bake in fairly hot oven, preheated to 190 deg. C. for about 40 minutes. Smaller pans take less time. Don't let them scorch.

This bread is a fine texture and flavor, full of nutrition, so a little goes a long way. Enjoy it with cheese, peanut butter and under many hot-skillet supper recipes.

For Brown Rice Bread, follow directions for Batter Bread. The cooked brown rice goes into the mixture after adding egg.

QUICK BATTER BREAD

- ¼ cup warm water
- 1 tsp. sugar
- 1 tsp. yeast granules (or 1 pkt.)
- 1 tbsp. sugar
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 (generous cup hot water
- ⅓ cup skim milk powder
- 1 small egg
- 1⅓ cups wholewheat flour
- 1½ cups unbleached flour
- ¼ cup soy flour
- 2 cups (approx.) unbleached flour

Amount of flour will vary with moisture content of cooked rice. Keep the last amount of flour separate to add only enough to make a stiff batter. It will be almost as smooth textured as Batter Bread except for the grains of rice.

Spoon into well greased 9 by 5 by 3 inch loaf pan, about three-quarters full. Surplus goes into 4-inch foil pans for buns. The larger loaf keeps moisture longer when cooked.

Put to rise in warm place (28 to 33 deg. C.) until double.

Preheat oven to fairly hot 190 deg. C.

Bake for 20 minutes, then reduce heat to 177 deg. C. if browning seems too rapid. Total time for large loaf, about 50 minutes. Buns will bake in 30 minutes.

Turn out all breads at once on wire rack to cool through.

Variety in homemade breads adds not only spice to meals but is a health measure, too, as our requirement for less quantity increases the need for high nutrition.

Brown Rice Bread

- ⅛ cup warm water
- 1 tsp sugar
- 1 tbsp yeast granules (or 1 pkt)
- 1 cup hot water
- 1 tbsp soft margarine
- 1 tsp salt
- 2 tsp sugar
- 1 small egg
- ¾ cup cooked brown rice
- ¼ cup wholewheat flour
- ¼ cup wheat germ
- ½ cup skim milk powder

Golden Gate Ham Served With Rice

- 12 ounces cooked boneless ham, cut in ½-inch strips (about 2½ cups)
- 1 can (16 oz.) sliced peaches (drain; reserve juice)
- ¼ cup seedless raisins
- 1 cup sliced onions
- 1 cup diagonally sliced celery
- 1 tablespoon butter or margarine
- 1½ cups orange juice
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- ½ teaspoon each salt, dry mustard and ginger
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 3 to 4 cups hot cooked rice.

Arrange ham, peaches and raisins in a greased shallow 2½-quart casserole. Set aside. Saute onions and celery in butter until tender crisp. Blend orange and peach juices into cornstarch and seasonings. Stir into vegetables; add soy sauce. Cook, stirring constantly, until slightly thickened. Pour over ham and fruit. Bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Serve over beds of fluffy rice.

Cleanliness Is Essential In Preparing Baby Food

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

eating right

Your baby's awake and crying, hungry. What are you going to do about it? Are you going to rush to the cupboard or refrigerator and open a jar of commercially prepared baby food? Or are you going to make something yourself for your baby?

They're both good ways of feeding your baby, as long as you know what you're doing. Do you know how to prepare your own baby food properly? Are you buying the best commercial food for your baby?

Making baby food at home is quite easy and, if you observe certain basic rules, it's completely safe. Start with standard kitchen utensils: a fine mesh strainer, spoons, dishes and other things you use every day in your kitchen. You'll find that a blender and a pressure cooker will speed up the job, but they're not essential. All your equipment must be clean. Sterilize all your utensils in boiling water before you use them. Wash fruits and vegetables thoroughly before you cook or puree them.

Cook the food as little as is necessary, in as little cooking water as possible. You'll avoid destroying the heat-sensitive nutrients and losing the water-soluble ones. Your baby's food will then be as nutritious as it can be.

You'll find it a quick and easy task to stew and puree fruits like apples, peaches, pears, apricots and prunes. They'll be a suitable consistency for your baby to swallow. Don't cook bananas. Just mash them well and serve them raw. Cook vegetables like peas, carrots, beets, squash and sweet potatoes, then strain them and serve. Your baby may even enjoy vegetables with relatively strong flavor: cabbage cauliflower, turnips, broccoli. Boil these vegetables, changing the water twice. You may lose some water-soluble nutrients in the process, but the flavor will be more palatable for your baby, and introducing these vegetables at an early age will help your baby develop good eating habits.

Eggs should be hard-cooked. If your baby is under eight or nine months of age, use only the yolk of the egg; mash it well and, perhaps, serve it with another, more fluid food. Young babies may develop allergies to egg white, so it's a good idea to wait until your baby is 10 months to a year old before feeding him the white of the egg.

Don't add flavoring substances of any kind to your baby's food: no sugar, no salt and no seasonings. Give your baby an opportunity to develop a taste for natural wholesome foods — not sweetened so that the natural flavor is masked. Sugar and salt won't add anything nutritionally to your baby's diet.

You don't have to bribe your baby to eat with sweetened food: he's going to eat because he's hungry, and needs to satisfy his caloric needs.

So, if you're using canned or frozen fruits and vegetables to prepare your baby's food, choose the ones that have no sugar or salt added to them; or else drain the syrup or brine off, and rinse the food at least once to cut down the amounts of sugar or salt that have been added. Buy only unsweetened fruit juices and strain them if you have to. And don't use adult foods that have flavor enhancers added to them, things like hydrolyzed vegetable protein or mono-sodium glutamate (MSG), when you're preparing food for your baby.

Try to avoid leftovers: Food kept for a few days in the fridge just isn't as safe for your baby as food that's just been prepared. We would never suggest that you just preserve enough food for one meal at a time. You would be dealing with a quarter of a peach and ridiculous amounts like that. Instead, do a whole batch of peaches at one time, store them in ice cube trays and then freeze them. Thaw them a cube at a time to body temperature. They'll be just about the right amount for one meal. If you do have any food leftover, keep it in a sterile container, tightly covered, in the refrigerator. But don't keep it for more than two or three days.

There are certain foods your baby might choke on, so we would advise you not to use them. They're things like nuts, raw peas, berries and other small, firm foods. Avoid chocolate and cocoa: they're unnecessary and are likely to cause an allergic reaction in your baby. Any teething biscuits you give your baby should contain no sugar. Candies and cookies add nothing to your baby's nutrition, cause tooth decay and lead to poor eating habits.

So much for preparing baby food yourself. It's a good way to control your baby's diet and be sure that, from an early age, your child will develop good eating habits. But there will be times when you will want to buy commercially-prepared food. Or perhaps you work, and haven't time to prepare the food yourself. Choose the food you buy with care. Avoid those that have sugar, salt, starch or other flavors added. Your best buys are strained meats with broth, fortified cereals without sugar or fruits added, and simple fruits and vegetables — the ones that have no sugar or salt added to them.

With some care and attention to choosing the right kinds of foods for your baby, you'll find you have a healthier, happier child, one who will have a taste for wholesome, nutritious foods and eating habits that will last a lifetime.

dear abby

Bow-wow's a Boozer

DEAR ABBY: Have you ever heard of an alcoholic dog? I think I have one. Every weekend my husband puts away eight six-packs of beer with the help of Rudy, our 10-year-old cocker spaniel.

I am not putting you on, Abby. It all started when Don (my husband) gave Rudy a taste of his beer. Rudy loved it, so Don gave him some more, and pretty soon it got to be a regular thing. Now after a few beers, Rudy chases his tail, staggers around and finally falls down and goes to sleep.

Can all this beer hurt the dog? Don says it can't. I say it can. Rudy can hardly wait until Friday, and when he sees Don carry those six-packs out of the car, he gets so excited he nearly goes crazy.

I would ask our vet but I'm ashamed — DON'S WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: My vet consultant says it is indeed possible for a dog to become addicted to beer. And I think anyone who would addict a dog is a dirty dog himself!

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my boyfriend's taste in clothes for me. When he goes shopping with me, or buys a gift of clothing for me, he always picks out something that's backless or so low in front I can't wear a bra. He also likes dresses that have long slits up the sides and hip-hugger pants that fit skin tight and show the belly button. He gave me a see-through blouse last Christmas and I haven't had the nerve to wear it yet.

I hate to hurt his feelings, but I feel uncomfortable wearing clothes that show so much. Am I too modest? Or do all guys like for their girls to dress this way? — MODEST.

DEAR MODEST: All guys are not eager for their girlfriends to put on a skin exhibition It's your body, and if you're uncomfortable in such get-ups, don't wear them for him or anybody else.

DEAR ABBY: No problem — I just thought you might enjoy a note our young daughter slipped under our bedroom door. It read:

DEAR ABBY: I have this real problem that only you can help me with. See, it's my parents. After 28 years of marriage, they still love each other! (Abnormal.) They still hold hands in public! (Disgusting.) They keep on telling me that they love me! (Humiliating.)

Do you think they should be committed for this? Say, to the Smithsonian Institution? Signed — POOR KID FROM UNDERPRIVILEGED MINORITY.

DEAR POOR KID: Are you bragging or complaining? I hope you're bragging because your parents are something to brag about.

LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I dread the thought of cold weather. The big toes of my feet turn white with cold even when I protect them. My ears get so cold, sometimes I think they're going to fall off. I'm 34 and have no other physical problems.— Miss D.H.

Dear Miss H.:

Almost everyone, when exposed to cold weather, will develop milk blanching (whitening) of the skin of the tips of the fingers and the toes.

However, when this is associated with cramps, inability to walk and interference with normal functioning activities, it must not be overlooked. It is a circulatory problem that deserves investigation.

Many tests are available that can quickly determine any change from normal blood circulation. The pulse beat in the feet and legs is a good indication of circulation. A special "blood pressure" apparatus for the feet can register normal and abnormal pulsations of the blood vessels.

The free flow of blood can be studied by elevating the legs and noting how quickly blanching occurs. There are also x-ray studies of the blood circulation, using dyes and radio isotopes.

All of these can give your doctor a clear picture of what is causing your problem.

Did you once say that nuts are dangerous to children?— Mrs. B.I.R.

Dear Mrs. R.:

I did. Toddlers and young children, when nibbling nuts, sometimes become distracted with laughter and play, and sometimes inhale a small nut into their lungs. Peanuts, especially, are offenders because of their small size. When this happens, the peanut can cause severe inflammation of the lungs.

If this occurs, the peanut must be removed by bronchoscopy. Personally, I feel that the nutritional value of nuts is not sufficient to take this chance. Children below the age of six, in my opinion, should not be offered nuts.

tiny bennett

For a cooking column to be of real value, it should enhance your daily menu, try to beat the ever-rising costs of foods and not only work on good nutrition, but it should deal with matters of health that are important to your eating habits.

Recently there has been a great deal of medical material published that is critical of the "junk" foods and urges us to return to eating some of the unrefined items that are removed from our food by modern processing systems.

Now I'm not writing about some "back-to-the-earth scheme" or nature foods from special stores, that type of writing tends to turn me off. What I am writing about is readily available and inexpensive foods we tend to ignore.

Since a minor heart attack in May, I've been gulping down about 35 prescribed pills a day and I've suffered the most unpleasant fits of depression. And if that's not bad enough, I have been terribly constipated, a condition my doctor assured me is caused by both the pills and the depression.

The doctor said that it could be easily cured by a roughage, dibre intake. So I got down to reading about this factor of fibre, the outer husks of grains, and discovered that they are not converted in one's digestive organs but stay in a bulk situation and tend to sweep the inner organ clean.

Africans who tend towards a wholemeal form of diet that includes the husks almost never suffer bowel cancer while on their natural diet. And there is no reason at all why we should, if we make a point of eating high-fibre material that is available at every store.

Once I'd finished my research, I popped into my local grocery store and made my way along the cereal counter. And there at the end of all the sweet, cracked and popped boxes I found natural, 100 per cent bran, at a most reasonable cost.

I bought a box each of Nabisco 100 per cent bran, at 71 cents for a 16-ounnce box — a dark-textured material formed into little rolls. I also bought a 10-ounce box of Quaker natural wheat bran at 28 cents a box in which the contents looked like the natural covering from the wheat when it is milled; indeed, this claim is made on the box.

So the first morning I ate the Nabisco in a bowl with dark brown sugar and skim milk, the second day I had a bowl of the natural Quaker with the same dark sugar and skim milk and the third day, I ate half and half of each, with a big spoonful of wheat germ for luck.

I've never been a cereal eater for breakfast and while discussing the subject, a friend said "Good heavens, I eat bran muffins for breakfast every morning. Just after we were married, my wife (a nurse) found I had a problem, so she's baked them every day, I've never had a bit of trouble since."

Trust the youngsters to know the score.

So ever since then, I've been baking bran muffins, surely one of the easiest items to bake.

If you want a pair of muffins for breakfast that will be healthful, then you must use the best ingredients. Any of the 100 per cent bran packets on the grocery shelf will be fine.

But this recipe of mine calls for molasses and this must be West Indian. They may be bottled or packed in Canada but they will state that they arrived in bulk in Canada from the West Indies.

BRAN MUFFINS

Beat one large egg until foamy, add one cup skim milk and beat in, then stir in three tablespoons cooking oil and finally two tablespoons coarse West Indian molasses. Stir in 1½ cups of 100 per cent bran, plus one heaped tablespoon wheat germ (optional) and let settle for five minutes. Into your large mixing bowl sift one cup all-purpose flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, ⅓ cup dark-brown sugar and one large cup of Australian seedless raisins — they should be Aussie raisins because they are the best in the world.

Now add the bran mix into the larger bowl and gently stir until it is all nicely mixed. It should become floppy enough to spoon into greased muffin pans — but only half-fill each cup. Now bake in a pre-heated oven set at 400 degrees for 20 minutes or until done.

It's easy to see when they are done; they go a nice brown on top and if you stick a thin knife through them, it will come out clean when done.

If you bake bran muffins for the reasons I've written, it is an everyday job, but isn't your health and the health and comfort of your family worth it?

Take 'Oops' Out of Soups With These Tasty Recipes

Surprisingly enough, it's easy to goof when you're making soup. In fact, good soup-making is sometimes considered to be a real challenge.

When you want to chase away those between-meal "hungries" with something that's not fattening, have a bouillon or broth soup. It's refreshing, hot or cold, and what's more, it contains few calories.

As an appetizer or first course, how about serving small portions of a light cream soup, broth or fruit soup? That's all it takes to whet everyone's appetite for the formal dinner you've prepared.

CHICKEN OR TURKEY BROTH

1 chicken or turkey carcass (from 5 to 8 pound bird)
6 cups water
3 celery stalks with leaves, cut in halves
1 medium onion, sliced
1 teaspoon salt
4 peppercorns
⅛ teaspoon thyme
1 bay leaf
2 cloves
3 sprigs fresh parsley

Cover carcass with water. Bring to boil. Add remaining ingredients, cover and simmer 2 hours. Strain and chill. Skim off fat and reheat to serve. 6 servings.

CHICKEN AND RICE SOUP

5 cups chicken broth
¾ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped carrot
¾ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 cup chopped cooked chicken
1½ cups cooked rice

Combine broth, vegetables and seasonings. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer until vegetables are tender (about 15 minutes). Add chicken and rice. Simmer until heated through (about 15 minutes). 6 servings.

CHICKEN NOODLE SOUP: Make as Chicken and Rice Soup, but use 1 ounce uncooked thin noodles in place of cooked rice and simmer until noodles are tender (about 15 minutes). 6 servings.

COUNTRY VEGETABLE SOUP

5 cups chicken broth
1½ cups chopped cabbage
1 cup sliced carrot
1 cup diced turnip
½ cup chopped celery
½ cup diced, peeled potatoes
¼ cup chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon curry powder

Combine ingredients. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer until vegetables are tender (about 30 minutes). 6 servings.

indoor gardens

by LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: Our Boston fern is doing just fine — I think. It appears to have "tentacles" and one of them has two small ferns growing on it. Is this normal? Can these be cut off and planted? Will they grow into big ferns? Thanks for all the information.—D.Y.

Dear D.Y.: An octopus has tentacles — a fern has runners. Yes, these runners can be planted as they are "offshoots," and this is one method of propagating ferns. Simply pot the runners in four-inch pots, using indoor potting mix. Keep consistently damp, sitting on moist pebbles in good light. Feed lightly every two weeks.

We suggest making "greenhouses" for the babies by carefully inserting "chopsticks" into the pot, then placing a plastic bag over the plants. This is helpful in the early stages.

Ferns (and all plants) correctly grown from cuttings, slips or runners tend to do very well indoors as they don't have to go through the changes of adjusting to a totally different environment from their place of birth. Happy growing.

Pork Cuts Are Easy On Budget

TORONTO (CP) — Although often thought of as hams, both cottage rolls and picnics are cut from the shoulder, not the leg, of the hog.

The home service staff at Canada Packers kitchens says that although sometimes not as lean as hams, cottage rolls and picnics are the delight of the budget-minded cook as they are nutritious, economical and tasty.

They can be sold either sweet pickled, that is cured only, or both cured and smoked.

"Cottage rolls pretty well always have the bone removed," they say in a news release, "while picnics may be sold either with the bone in or with it removed."

There are two different types of cottage rolls and picnics — ready-to-serve and cook-and-serve.

Ready-to-serve products have been fully cooked prior to packaging. They may be sliced and served cold or heated until the internal temperature on a meat thermometer reaches 130 degrees Fahrenheit.

The cook-and-serve types must be cooked prior to serving and require an internal temperature of 170 degrees.

Cooking methods for these cuts will vary depending on the degree and type of processing.

METRIC TURKEY STUFFING

Don't despair if you look around the supermarket for a large 10 kg turkey this Christmas and you can't fine one. Poultry and meat won't be sold in grams and kilgrams until scales are converted to metric in the food retail industry. This will likely occur sometime during 1978.

You can still go ahead and fill your turkey with metric stuffing. Just use your metric dry measures and small measures to get the volume of the ingredients. Allow about 250 ml stuffing per kilogram of turkey (remember 1 kilogram is slightly more than 2 pounds). This recipe makes enough for a small turkey (4 kilograms) but can easily be doubled to stuff a larger turkey. Before roasting your turkey, insert a meat thermometer in the center of the stuffing. The thermometer should read 70 degrees C (165 degrees F), when the turkey is cooked.

BREAD STUFFING

1000 ml soft bread crumbs
3 ml salt
0.5 ml pepper
3 ml savory
2 ml thyme
75 ml chopped onion
75 ml chopped celery
75 ml butter, melted
1 beaten egg

Combine bread crumbs and seasonings. Saute onion and celery in butter until onion is transparent. Add to crumbs. Add egg, mixing lightly but thoroughly. Makes about 1000 ml.

DANCERS AT GALLERY

MEMORIAL ARENA
TINY TOTS SKATING
1:30-3:00 p.m.
PUBLIC SKATING
4:00-5:45 p.m.
9-29

An afternoon of dance takes the usual concert spot at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Sunday at 3 p.m. It will be presented by the Dance Arts Co-op, a semi-professional group of dancers which is attempting to bring a greater awareness of the dance to this community.

There is no extra charge for the performance over general gallery admission.

Composers To Have Public Hearing

Works of young composers are being given a public hearing this week at two concerts sponsored by University of Victoria's New Music Club under the title, OGGI II. The program for both concerts contain compositions for instrumental ensembles, electronic tapes, and combinations of these.

The concerts will take place Friday in UVic's MacLaurin auditorium at 8 p.m. and Saturday at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, also at 8 p.m. Some of the recent works by UVic and other Victoria composers will be heard for the first time.

Thanks to the co-operation of the University Alma Mater Society, there will be no admission charge for the concerts.

Open Space Gallery Transfers to Warehouse

Temporary accommodation for Open Space Gallery and the Secession Gallery of Photography has been found at a CPR-donated warehouse building at 1980 Government, opposite Labatt's.

The transfer is being made while the original Fort Street Open Space location undergoes $30,000 worth of renovation, which is expected to be completed by mid to late January.

When completed the facility at 510 Fort will include a 300-seat theatre, space for both galleries, and office space. A modified ramp is being built to accommodate the handicapped.

In addition to exhibitions, mime, dance events, concerts and poetry readings will form an on-going program.

The gallery at 1980 Government is now open with an exhibition of the paintings of Tom LaPierre. This is a Canadian artist, the content of whose works has been likened to Gruenwald, Bosch, Kafka and Beckett. He deals with the uncompromising reality of the life cycle.

Toys Fragile? Make Yours

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — If you find the standard line of commercial toys too fragile or too expensive, Gary Jeffrey suggests you try to make some.

Mr. Jeffrey, a professor of child psychology at Memorial University, held a workshop recently to teach parents how to make wooden toys.

While the professor concedes such creations might not be as attractive as toys advertised on television, "once the child notices them, he uses them a lot."

Home-made toys are unquestionably more durable, far less expensive and more easily repaired and generally lack parts that can be swallowed by youngsters.

"There are some good commercial toys," Prof. Jeffrey said, "but there's a lot of junk on the market that breaks easily, looks pretty but is almost useless."

Wooden toys provide children with more opportunity to pretend. They lack the detailed realism of some products and offer more scope for a child to use imagination.

The job of producing a wooden toy is not difficult—most of those who attended the professor's workshop had never done woodworking before yet all went home with at least one toy they had made and some produced a couple.

The toys did not lack variety either. There were space ships, cars, boats and planes and that old reliable, the spin top. Most cost about 35 cents; the most expensive was about $1.50 in materials.

Prof. Jeffrey considered the toy-making workshop "a roaring success," and if the demand is high enough, he'll consider future workshops.

JAPANESE BUY JETFOIL

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co. said Tuesday the comp-any's first Jetfoil hydro plane for commercial operation in Japan will be launched in Renton Thursday.

The vessel will be christened Okesa by Mrs. Sono Uchida, wife of the consul general of Japan, while celebrations will include a Shinto religious ceremony and dancers from Sado Island, Japan.

The Okesa will be tested in Puget Sound for delivery next spring. The vessel will serve between Honshu, the main island of Japan, and Sado Island in the Sea of Japan.

Ulster Outlook Grim in '77

By JOHN HAY

LONDON (CP) — The future of Northern Ireland looks as gloomy as ever for 1977, despite the goodwill generated by the rise of the women's peace movement.

An attempt at political compromise between the Protestant majority and Roman Catholic minority collapsed early in 1976 and terrorists of both sides committed more than 275 murders to make it the bloodiest year in Ulster since 1972.

Almost 1,700 people have been killed in the six counties since the Northern Irish troubles began in 1969.

Ulster's politicians, many of them dispirited and even more discredited, seem incapable of any new initiative toward peace and direct rule from Westminster seems inevitable.

Following the final collapse of a constitutional convention fairs was the sudden growth last March, the most impor-

It was started last August by two Roman Catholic of the peace movement.

when three little children were killed by a car whose women who were horrified tant development in Ulster afterrorist driver had been shot dead by a soldier.

Within weeks, the movement had attracted thousands of followers in street rallies in Ulster and Britain.

Its leaders, housewife Betty Williams and secretary Mairead Corrigan, say the movement is trying to bring the warring communities together, to overcome the barriers of hatred and fear that have bedevilled Ulster for years.

Popular response has surprised often-cynical observers of the Northern Irish scene and seems to reflect a yearning on both sides for peace and safety.

Two factors, however, make the prospects for peace look bleak.

First, the violent paramilitary groups—the provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) on the Catholic side and the terrorist factions of the Protestant Ulster Defence Association—need not respond to public opinion.

They thrive by fomenting deepest prejudices and by instilling fear in their own communities through extortion and protection rackets.

The extremists have already set out to destroy the peace movement, each calling it a plot by the enemy side.

Second, Northern Irish political leaders remain in motionless stalemate.

The British government has insisted that any government in Belfast should include both Protestant and Catholic leaders in a power-sharing cabinet.

Most of the so-called loyalists—the Protestants—reject this idea, calling instead for a cabinet elected by and representing the Protestant majority of Ulster's 1.5 million people.

It was on precisely this issue that the constitutional convention broke down last March, and on which there has since been no progress.

The stalemate, from which there appears no early escape, has led to increased interest in another solution: creation of an independent Ulster republic.

An unlikely collection of Protestant extremists, academics and journalists met recently to study the implications of independence, but its reality appears remote.

The chief obstacle, which has foiled all past attempts at compromise, remains. The two communities—or at least their leaders—have not overcome the suspicion that each is endangered by any compromise with the other.

Give your family our best.

Swiss Set for N-Bombs

By HANNS NEURBOURG

LUCERNE, Switzerland (AP) — While many countries have largely given up on civil defence projects, traditionally neutral Switzerland has developed bomb shelters in Alpine tunnels and taken other measures in a $2.4-billion program to protect its six million people in the event of nuclear war.

The latest addition is the Sonnenberg superhighway tunnel through the Alps near here. In case of war, four giant steel and concrete doors will close, converting the tunnel into the country's largest air-raid shelter.

Defence experts say the program gives Switzerland a greater chance of nuclear survival than any other country.

Right now, 3.2 million people can move to underground blast and radiation-proof safety. By 1990 not a single resident of the country will have to look in vain for shelter, government officials say.

Under one of the world's most comprehensive civil defence programs initiated 14 years ago, every Swiss household is required to build and stock its own private shelter. Each family has been given a civil defence handbook.

About 600 ever-ready underground emergency hospitals are spread around the country, as well as command posts and equipment warehouses.

Sonnenberg, the biggest Swiss installation, is also the biggest in Europe and some Swiss experts believe it may be without parallel in the world.

Situated on the edge of this lakeside resort, Sonnenberg is not listed in any tourist guide. But when it was opened to the public for four days upon its recent completion, more than 80,000 Swiss inspected it. Among those previously given a separate guided visit was a delegation from China. The Chinese said they were looking for models for a similar shelter at Shanghai.

Interest centres on the seven storey command post and hospital cavern between the two 4,660-foot tunnel tubes.

The hospital comprises two surgery wards, an intensive care unit and beds for 328 patients. Rooms are painted in cheerful colors selected by a leading Swiss psychologist.

The command post features a police station, complete with file cabinets and a minijail and a studio for closed-circuit radio. Shelter residents will be showered with soothing music or rock—"depending on the temperament of the individual section chiefs in the tunnel," explained Charles Brand, head of Lucerne's public works and a chief civil defence official.

The installation has its own water well, diesel generating plant, air filters for the kitchens, unbreakable dishes imported from the United States and clocks made in Germany.

Collapsible three-tier bunks for 20,700 people can be put up within hours after hydraulic power closes the four doors, which weigh 350 tons each. Those who don't make it in time can still slip in through a small emergency entrance.

Residents will have to bring their own food stocks, made up in accordance with a list issued by the federal Office for Economic War Preparedness.

"The Swiss setup is probably unrivalled," observed Milan Modi, the secretary general of the Geneva-based International Civil Defence Organization.

Gottried Petr, a department chief in the Swiss federal Office of Civil Defence, agrees that in case of a nuclear war the Swiss may have a greater survival chance than any other country.

"But what will come afterward is another question," he said, "specifically if the food base is destroyed."

DAD CAN BREAST-FEED BABY, DOCTOR SAYS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — There is no physical reason why a man can't breast-feed a baby, says a Georgia authority on endocrine glands.

Dr. Robert B. Greenblatt told a gynecology symposium at North Memorial Medical Centre that milk production in men can be touched off naturally.

"It just takes enough stimulation," said Greenblat, adding that the stimulation can be obtained by letting a baby suckle at a man's nipple for several weeks.

Dr. Greenblatt, professor emeritus at the Georgia Medical School in Augusta, said there is also a drug that can turn men into breast-feeders. It works the same way it does on a woman, he said, overcoming the hormone "inhibitor" which prevents a never-pregnant woman from producing milk.

Greenblatt said that milk production can start in men, as ell as women, as the result of illness. He said it may happen when there is a tumor of the pituitary gland or a disorder, called acromegaly, a pituitary malfunction that causes extreme enlargement of the head, face, hands and feet.

How to cut the high cost of garbage

Each one of us discards an average of 4 pounds of garbage a day — 1,500 pounds a year. That's energy we're throwing away!

By avoiding unnecessary products, and reusing and recycling the rest of them, we can save a tremendous amount of energy for Canada. And money for ourselves.

The Garbage Book shows you how to reduce your garbage. It's new and free. Separate chapters deal with packaging, consumer products, food waste, yard waste, composting and setting up a recycling program in your community.

Mail the coupon today for your free copy of The Garbage Book.

All you've got to lose is your garbage!

Pulp Mill Cleaning Its Act

FREDERICTON (CP) — The St. Anne-Nackawic Pulp and Paper Co. at nearby Nackawic is cleaning up its act.

At a cost of $3.4 million it is installing a pollution control system. Carl Landegger, company president, says the system, when it goes into operation at the end of 1977, will stop foul-smelling emissions from the mill.

Residents and tourists in the area have complained about these smells for years.

It will be the only complete system of its kind in the world, although parts of the system are used at some non-Canadian mills, said Mr. Landegger. Called the TESI system, it is named after the company that developed it, Teller Environmental Systems Inc. of Worcester, Mass.

The system recaptures the chemicals it uses for a saving of about $700 a day. In addition, it heats enough water to cut the cost of oil, saving an estimated 45,000 barrels of oil a day, Mr. Landegger said.

As a result, the system should pay for itself in three to five years.

Dr. Adolf Wawer, research and development director for the mill, said if the project succeeds, the federal government will have an argument to force paper mills across the country to install similar systems.

Mr. Landegger, who also controls mills or foundries in Saskatchewan, Ontario and six foreign countries, said he would have the system installed at his mill in Prince Albert, Sask. if it works well.

Environment Canada has contributed $1 million of the cost of the system.

Get-Rich Breeders Decried

TORONTO (CP) — Experts in breeding dogs say they are worried that some breeders are setting up puppy factories to meet growing public demand for pets with a pedigree.

Ed Dixon, director of the Canadian Kennel Club, says breeders fall into two categories.

There are the purists whose hobby is to breed for the show ring. And there are those getting into breeding primarily for the money.

"Too many backyard breeders are simply after a fast buck," Mr. Dixon complained. "They are not concerned with hereditary faults.

"Inbreeding and indiscriminate breeding have affected many breeds and now present our greatest problem."

The club had 61,805 individual applications across Canada for the registration of purebred puppies two years ago. It predicts more than 76,000 this year.

Ottawa: Captain Who?

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

History-conscious British Columbians are upset over the federal government's apparent lack of interest in commemorating the bicentenary of Capt. James Cook's landing at Nootka Sound in 1778.

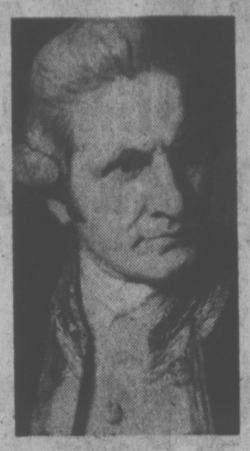

Ruth Barnett, of Campbell River, secretary of the British Columbia Historical Association, said Ottawa hasn't yet shown any "inclination" to mark the historical event which had world-wide significance 200 years ago.

The BCHA wrote to Postmaster General Jean-Jacques Blais requesting a special stamp issue commemorating Cook's voyage to the Pacific Northwest, but so far has not had a reply.

"It takes time to prepare a stamp issue," she pointed out. "If something is to be done planning has to start now."

She added the lack of interest indicates that Ottawa still thinks Canada ends at Thunder Bay.

James McCook, president of the association's Victoria branch, said the CBC also has been asked if it plans a documentary on Cook, but so far there has been no reply.

COOK

"We are waiting anxiously for word as to what is to be done to suitably observe Cook's anniversary," he said. "The province plans to do something, but that isn't enough."

Historians say the printing of a special stamp issue on Cook's voyage is justified.

Ottawa has printed stamps honoring explorers like Jacques Cartier, Samuel de Champlain, Chevalier de la Salle, Martin Frobisher but none on Cook, regarded today as one of the world's greatest explorers.

Cook's landing on Vancouver Island had important international ramifications because he confirmed a British claim to that stretch of coast which is now part of British Columbia.

But Cook's voyages (three in all) are also honored today for their scientific and artistic achievement.

Their contributions to human knowledge have affected many fields of science including navigation, botany, history, geography, medicine and continue to be significant.

Cook was a humanitarian and was honored by the courts of Europe in his day.

History also shows him as a man who respected the rights of the west coast Indians and his concern for their future — once European traders reached the coast.

The United States today regards Cook a part of its history because of the part he played in exploring the coast of Alaska. Australia and New Zealand also regard him as one of their own.

Skull Dates Back 500,000 Years

DALLAS (UPI) — A team of Southern Methodist University scientists has announced discovery of the well-preserved human skull of early man thought to have lived in Africa more than 500,000 years ago.

The skull, discovered about three weeks ago in Ethiopia's fossil-rich Danakil depression, was dubbed "bodo man" after the area.

The 10-member Rift Valley research mission, sponsored by SMU and six other institutions, also found hand axes in layers above and below the fossil face, indicating the man had developed the use of tools.

Nearby were fossilized remains of nine hippopotamuses, crocodiles and antelope, leading scientists to speculate the area may have served as a prehistoric "butchers shop."

LOCH HUNTERS FAIL TO TRACE MONSTER

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A Boston-based team which spent the summer looking for creatures in Scotland's Loch Ness says it found some interesting items—but no monster.

Sonar studies indicated something sizable in the loch waters and what might be the carcass of a creature on the lake bottom. But it could also be a sunken boat.

Martin Kein of Salem, N.H., said the sonar target located about 300 feet below the water's surface resembled a 30-foot-long carcass with a long neck.

The scientific expedition, using sophisticated electronic gear, was sponsored by the Academy of Applied Sciences and the New York Times.

The group's report will be published this week in Technology Review, the alumni publication of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, university spokesman said.

Modern 'Sweep' No Grubby Urchin

TORONTO (CP) — The modern chimney sweep is no longer the grubby street urchin of a Dickens novel.

Today the sweep is a full-grown man. Using powerful vacuum cleaners and modern tools, he provides a service that can prevent fires and cut heating costs.

Fireplace and furnace chimneys, especially those for furnaces burning wood or coal, should be cleaned once a year, says Chief William Sproule of the Toronto fire prevention bureau. He adds that the 250 chimney fires in Toronto last year, more than half in private homes, could have been prevented by better chimney care.

Keeping a chimney clean can save from 30 to 50 per cent in heating costs. It also lessens air pollution.

Homeowners can check and clean their own chimneys. A simple method to tell if a chimney needs cleaning requires only a mirror held in the fireplace opening or in the cleanout flue. If light can be seen the chimney is probably safe for another season. If not, it needs cleaning.

Agile people who aren't afraid to climb on the roof can clean their own chimneys by filling a burlap bag with crushed stone, attaching a rope and lowering it into the chimney while moving it up and down. Done regularly, the method will clean 75 per cent of the soot and oily deposits from the chimney.

If that seems a bit adventurous, a heating contractor or professional chimney sweep should be called.

Norman Lenz, owner of Toronto Chimney Service Ltd., is one of the city's most colorful sweeps. Lenz learned his trade in eight years of apprenticeship and journeyman training in Berlin, where he earned the status of master chimney sweep.

His company employs five full-time sweeps. Lenz says the average cost of cleaning a fireplace chimney is $35. If there is a furnace chimney as well, his firm does both for $45. Neighbors who get together and place a group order can cut costs.

Although vacuum cleaners have modernized the job, a self-respecting chimney sweep still works with the traditional brushes to loosen the soot, Lenz says. Using tarpaulins and vacuum cleaners it needn't be a messy procedure.

Some of the companies providing chimney-cleaning service in Toronto are one-man outfits; others are complete fireplace construction and repair firms that do chimney cleaning as a part of their business.

John's Chimney Service is a one-man service run by John Gross, who worked as a sweep in Austria. He will make a house call anywhere in Toronto for $20. Most of his business is from September to Christmas and sometimes a customer has to wait a week for service.

Chief Sproule warns that some chimney sweep companies are fly-by-night operations run by people who don't a cleaning can be a little like taking your car into a garage for a minor tune-up and paying for a major overhaul. Some companies will tell homeowners a chimney needs expensive repair work in addition to a cleaning.

By FRED KARPIN

When today's deal was played in a team-of-four match, both South declarers arrived at a minor-suit game contract via the identical bidding sequence. The same opening lead was made at each of the two tables. The fate of the contract now rested on the shoulders of the two East defenders.

North's raise to five diamonds was not a good call. He should have bid four hearts, to ply a 10-trick contract rather than an 11-trick one.

NORTH
♠ A Q 10 7 5 2
◇ 8 6 3

WEST	EAST
♠ J 9 6	♠ K 8 3

◇ A K Q 9 2
♣ J 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

When the deal was played originally, East cashed the king and ace of clubs at tricks one and two. He then led a low heart, South's ace taking the trick. Next came the ace and king of trumps, West discarding a club on the second trump lead.

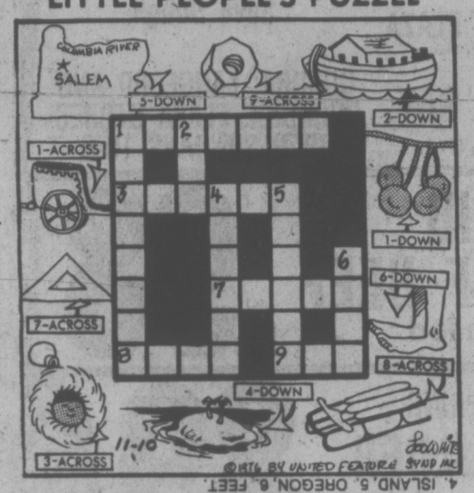

Dummy was now entered via the spade ace, after which the board's remaining tump was led. When East followed suit with the seven, South's nine-spot was inserted with the assurance that it would win the trick. The queen of trumps then felled East's jack, and with the jack of hearts falling, the rest of the tricks belonged to declarer.

On the replay, after cashing the king and ace of clubs, East did not make the passive return of a low heart. East had listened to the bidding, which indicated that South had five hearts and five diamonds. And in the play South had followed suit to two club leads. So south figured to have just one spade.

At trick three East returned a spade, West's jack being taken by dummy's queen — and, simultaneously, the only entry to dummy had just been removed.

Declarer was now doomed to defeat. He led a trump to his ace, felling West's ten, and followed up by leading the trump king, West discarding a club. Unable to reach dummy to finesse against East's jack of trumps, declarer was now compelled to lose the setting trick to East's jack.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, December 9

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Chips are down where basics are concerned. Theory goes out of window — now it is performance that counts. Utilize past experience, lessons. Take nothing for granted. One who attempts to skip over legal matters is not thinking of your welfare. Act accordingly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New start in new direction is indicated. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. Relative announces an abrupt switch in policy, life style. Maintain your own balance — and sense of humor. Partner or mate show you way to overcome mountain of red tape.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Follow through on hunch — learn by teaching. Give full-play to intuitive intellect. Cancer, Aquarius individuals figure prominently. Money, changes, possessions, ability to make most of assets — these are spotlighted. Lost object is recovered.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Highlight versatility — expand horizons. Be willing to accept, to receive as enthusiastic associate wants to co-operate, to share to work in your behalf. Cycle is high — what seems a setback boomerangs in your favor. Scorpio says I adore you and, most likely, means it.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Study Cancer message for meaningul hint. What seems hidden, fearful is merely a pussy cat. Know it and respond accordingly. You are not trapped, merely going through a testing period. You'll be stronger as result. You can be happier, too, if you so permit.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be ready for special dealing with member of opposite sex, for change and travel, for messages from a Gemini. Accent on wishes, ability to make constructive contacts, to improve image, to show that you can feel pulse of public.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Home influence, environment figure prominently. Taurus individual has much to say about values, costs, investments. Your ability to lead, counsel, assume responsibility, bring together opposing forces is highlighted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Steer clear of self-deception — see as is, not merely as you wish situations, people could be. Avoid direct confrontations — gain shown if you read, learn new "lessons" and communicate with "home office." Pisces, Virgo individuals figure in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Involvement is on agenda — nothing is halfway. If playing games where emotions are involved, be advised stakes are high. Accent on digging deep, getting to heart of matters, striking pay dirt. You'll see!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lie low — finish what you start. Opportunity exists to improve public relations, to gain greater understanding of one close to you. One with delusions of grandeur makes confession. Maintain your own balance. Continue to detect subtle signals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What seemed a setback turns out to be temporary delay. You're going places, you get chance for new start, added independence. A "Bossy" person learns a lesson and your prestige soars. Leo could be involved.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An individual with "far out" ideas wants you to participate in scheme. Refuse to be foolish enough to give up something for nothing; lines of communication could be temporarily blocked. Excitement of knowing you are loved is also part of your personal scenario.

IF DECEMBER 9th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are knowledgeable about drama, law and interested in medicine. People are drawn to you with their problems. You are frank, dynamic, somewhat of a "ham" fond of travel, reading and able to express your view in dynamic fashion. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. You're due for wider recognition in 1977 — August will be your most significant month.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Fred had just finished off a bunch of grapes when Mary came into the room. "You ate the lot," she exclaimed, picking up the empty platter. "How many did you have?"

"Not so many, Mom," the boy replied. "Some had three seeds and the rest had two. Half the number with two seeds was one less than the number of seeds in the 3-seed grapes, but there were only about 70 pips in all."

How many grapes?

Thanks for idea to Peter Dance, Lakefield, Ontario.

Hardy Vegetables Still Good

In gardens visited by ground and air frosts this month, plus chilly overcast days, only the hardiest vegetables provide valuable food for December meals.

I find curly endive in an open row has turned to mush from frost, while a few in a square plot with shelter from buildings and shrubs, remain in good shape.

From this I plan to grow more in the sheltered area next year for winter use, for endive is fine to cut off in single leaves to go with other salad greens.

Hardiest of the lettuce is Black-Seeded Simpson, although a dozen plants of Buttercrunch sheltered by a large shrubby plant are still good. Outer leaves of lettuce are now used in soups or cooked lightly with swiss chard. The inner young leaves are as crisp and tender as at any time in summer or early fall.

Young parsley plants produce very little during cooler weather in our garden though warmer gardens have supplies all through normal winters. Chervil, however, makes a fair substitute growing in our more sheltered plot. It continues until late spring.

The dozen plants of Scotch curly kale have a plastic bag of young leaves cut from them every two or three days. With these handy in the refrigerator they have many uses. Left out on the plants they would only be part of perhaps a couple of meals during each week. As it is, leaves are constantly being used in unexpected ways, adding those much needed vitamins for winter energy.

This is one of the highest value vegetables to grow in the smallest of gardens. One plant in each of two 12-inch planters of good soil on a balcony would I believe give ample young green leaf pickings for two or three people from October through winter until early May.

Just as useful and successful would two plants of kale be in a small patio apartment garden. They need light, and sunshine whenever available, and kale seems to have no insect enemies nor ddoes it require more than a well dug, firm soil and watering from planting time in May or June through the summer until late October rains take over the job.

A partially covered frame is giving a continuous crop of succulent chickweed for salads. If you have chickweed growing in your garden this winter, try this delicacy. Take a dozen tip growths of young leaves and flower buds for a taste. They have a freshness not equalled by any other green salading. And their mineral and vitamin content makes them worth adding to conventional winter lettuce.

The surprise of the week has been sweet tender roots of white turnips, Early Snowball sown August 2, and being grown mainly for young leaves in late spring when most needed.

In searching for a few leaves now, I came across roots two to three inches across. The first thought was to add them in big chunks for flavor and a few extra vitamins to different kinds of soup. The surprise was to find the chunks were so tender, sweet and mild. Now they go into several other dishes, diced for quick cooking. The small undeveloped turnip roots will be left for new leaf growth in spring.

Whatever can be grown at home, should be planned now for next year's winter garden — and that is the reason for the apparent bragging about these few fresh gatherings. Other gardeners will have a much grander assortment and quantity, but I doubt that anyone gets more pleasure and benefit.

Soldiers Miss Snow Training

FORT LEWIS, Wash. (AP) — The rare lack of snow in the Northwest has left 1,700 soldiers without their usual deep-winter survival training in the mountains.
Soldiers of the 9th Division's 3rd Brigade at Fort Lewis were scheduled for snow drills in the Snoqualmie National Forces on the east slope of the Cascade Mountains beginning Tuesday. But since there was no snow, the drills were rescheduled for the Yakima Firing Centre, beginning Thursday. Yakima was snowless, too.

B.C. TO FIGHT CNT PHONE HIKE

Transport and Communications Minister Jack Davis said Tuesday the provincial government intends to fight a Canadian National Telecommunications application to increase telephone rates by as much as 45 per cent in northern British Columbia.

If approved, the new CNT rates would hit northeast B.C. communities with increases ranging from 2.2 per cent to 45 per cent.

"The largest increases would apply to the smaller communities," said Davis. "The proposed rates are substantially higher than those of B.C. Telephone and even higher than CNT rates in Newfoundland.

CNT operates the telephone service in the Northwest Territories, the Yukon and Northeastern B.C.

Whither or Wither Problem Faces City, Glazier Tells CRB

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Whither Greater Victoria, economically speaking?

Victoria Ald. Murray Glazier said today it's essential that the area's municipal leaders start framing an answer to that question, or the alternative might be wither Greater Victoria, economically speaking.

He told the Times he would present a resolution to this afternoon's meeting of the Capital Region Board, asking regional directors to take the initiative in finding out "what makes the region's economy really tick" and what blood transfusion it needs for a healthy future.

The resolution would urge the regional board to "organize a series of background research to serve as a basis for community forums to identify the realities of the regional economy and ways for improvement."

What he envisages, Glazier said in an interview, is a series of commissioned studies and papers adding up to a more comprehensive and detailed economic picture than has ever been assembled locally before.

He would like to see this process involve every segment of Greater Victoria's fabric, including industry, tourism, government, and the University of Victoria and the retirement industry.

Once the material was assembled it would be feasible for the first time to relate one aspect to another and to the over-all economic situation; to achieve some sort of "overview."

Glazier said the community in general seems to know "intuitively" what has to be done to arrest the downward economic slide, "but nobody is making any organized effort to focus attention on the possible solutions."

There are conflicting theories as to the causes and remedies. Some see industry as the primary solution, others favor concentration on Victoria's retirement scene, while yet others insist that the future must lie in promoting tourism.

Who is right? And if all are partially right, to what extent does one aim conflict with another?

If industry is "cranked up" and the smoke stacks start belching, will it drive away the retired residents and tourists? Just how much does retirement shelter the economy of this region?

These are just some of the questions that need answers and detailed analysis, the alderman said.

"We can build this data by using the resources of the community, drawing from leaders in social services, business, finance, the professions and the university for research in each particular field."

Harbor Site Czar Mulled by Bawlf

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf is considering hiring a development co-ordinator to guide the long-term development of provincially-owned land on Victoria's Inner Harbor, Mayor Mike Young said Tuesday.

The mayor referred to the proposed overseer's appointment in replying to complaints from city businessmen about the apparent lack of long-range planning on harbor improvement.

The criticism surfaced at the monthly meeting of council's central business district advisory committee, after members were given details of a $100,000 clean-up and repair project on the former Reid Centre site on Wharf Street.

Alan Emery, president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce, suggested the money might be better spent on sponsoring a design contest for the integrated rehabilitation of the Inner Harbor.

He asked "who if anyone is doing what if anything" in the planning process.

Young replied that the Social Credit government is only now "starting to look seriously" at the Inner Harbor, a process which would include the development co-ordinator.

But he stressed that it will be at least two or three years before any tangible progress is made because there are serious problems to be overcome, including the question of funding.

Young defended the policy of interim improvements on the former Ocean Cement site and the Reid property, saying much of the work was necessary as part of the road works program on Wharf and to improve public safety.

The work on the Reid site, scheduled to start Jan. 1, will include removal of the old wharf or dock section, where the piles are rotten and the decking has collapsed.

Greenless Piledriving Ltd. has been awarded the contract for this part of the job.

SOME FIRINGS NEEDED–ANDRAS

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should fire more civil servants for negligence, incompetence and mishandling of the taxpayers' money, Treasury Board president Robert Andras said today.

He told the Senate finance committee that there should be "a lot more evidence" of firings in cases where civil servants are found guilty in incompetence or neglect.

Andras, head of the federal financial controlling agency, was responding to complaints by Senator Herbert Sparrow (L-Saskatchewan) that civil servants frequently are merely tansferred.

"I don't understand why, if there is mismanagement, someone is not made responsible," Sparrow said.

"You mean fired," Andras replied. "You are probably correct, there should be a lot more evidence of that nature."

X-Rays Defective

OTTAWA (CP) — Hospitals with British-made computerized x-ray machines have been told they may need correction to eliminate excess radiation exposure to patients, a spokesman for the federal health department said.

He said the $500,000 machines do not pose a serious problem because the additional radiation they emit is minor. Only six or seven hospitals in Canada own the computerized axial tomography units, he added.

There are none in the Victoria area.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday repairs will be made on the 267 of the machines in hospitals and clinics throughout the United States.

The machines are manufactured by EMI Ltd. in Hayes, Middlesex, England and were marketed in North America between Aug. 1, 1974 and Oct. 19, 1976.

Floral Paradise In Wilderness

DEEP COVE, B.C. (CP) — A 72-year-old doctor has transformed a three-acre island near Vancouver into a garden paradise of rare plants, lily ponds and towering trees.

During the past 35 years Bill Hatfield found time to garden while he ran a medical practice, was an associate professor at University of British Columbia, worked at four or five hospitals and founded Vancouver's Seymour medical clinic which now has 30 doctors.

The island is Lone Rock, two miles northeast of here on Indian Arm, a channel off Burrard Inlet. Sometimes called Terpoorten Island by local residents, the island is about 100 yards off the shore of a tiny community called Woodlands.

Dr. Hatfield, now retired, bought the island from a man named Terpoorten who had started to lay out the garden in the 1920s.

"It was very overgrown when I bought it.

"The basic work of the garden had been done but nature had pretty well taken over again. The first growth of trees had gone—they could have been logged or burned I guess."

The Hatfield family originally used the island as a summer retreat because they also had a city home.

"This is one of the oldest areas for summer cottages in Vancouver—it's even older than Deep Cove," says Dr. Hatfield.

The island has steep, rocky sides and spectacular views in all directions of the water, mountains and forest of Indian Arm. In this setting Dr. Hatfield planted rhododendrons, azaleas, roses, lilies, pansies, fuchsias, hydrangeas, heather, lilacs and clematis.

"I had a growing family to help me," says the doctor. "In those days, teen-agers didn't mind work—not like today.

Because the island is small, every inch of space is used and carefully tended. There's a tidal swimming pool carved out of rock, a tiny windmill, an ivy-covered stone archway, several lily ponds, a greenhouse and hundreds of yards of log-edged paths.

Dr. Hatfield has a conservatory in which passion fruit ripens.

Margaret Charlton, a neighbor with a house on the Woodlands mainland, says: "All year long, there is something blooming there."

Mrs. Charlton, a member of the Alpine Garden Society of B.C., helps the doctor with much of his garden work.

Until Dr. Hatfield built a catwalk from the mainland to the island about nine years ago, the only way of getting to and from the mainland was by boat, rowing 100 yards to the other shore.

"Building that bridge was just about as bad as constructing the Lions Gate Bridge," he says. "It had to go through all the committees from here to Ottawa. I had to get a document signed by two cabinet ministers because I was interfering with navigable waters."

But eventually Dr. Hatfield found his way through all the paper work and the bridge was built.

The same sort of change has come to the community of Woodlands. Originally its only connection to Vancouver was by ferry. Now there's a gravel road from North Vancouver to Woodlands and most of the residents go to work in the city every day.

Russians Replace Americans In Laos Capital

By JOHN ROGERS

VIENTIANE (Reuter) — Russians now outnumber the American and French settlers who used to haunt the bars of this pleasant little capital of the year-old People's Democratic Republic of Laos.

There is still plenty of evidence in many major buildings and in the prevalent international language of the former French colonial era.

Some of the cars in the streets and occasional snatches of English-language conversations are a reminder that the Americans were here too. Though popular names of bars and other external signs of the United States presence have been scrapped.

There are an estimated several hundred Russians in the country. They work for development projects, including a new town to be built in central Laos, or are involved with the Soviet embassy or in aviation.

There are Vietnamese too in Vientiane, but they are less evident that the Russians, though they are belived to be politically as influential with the ruling Lao People's Revolutionary Party, with which Hanoi enjoys close historical ties.

The Chinese are also less noticeable that the Russians, partly a reflection of less political leverage but also of the fact that they, like the Vietnamese, blend better into the local scenery.

Chinese influence is strongest in a large chunk of Laotian countryside in the north and notably in Phongsaly province.

Prime Minister Kaysone Phomrihan recently returned from a six-week tour of the Soviet Union, Cuba and other socialist countries.

The trip resulted in a number of trade, economic and cultural agreements, and government officials are confident of more economic aid, especially in building up the country's fledgling industry.

The Laotian Supreme Assembly is studying a new constitution, which Information Minister Sisana Sisan says will be completely democratic and Laotian.

A common sight in the capital are Pathet Lao soldiers, in baggy green uniform and toting AK-47 automatic rifles. Young, cheerful country boys, they appear to get along with the townsfolk.

They are the visible evidence of the Pathet Laos control of the capital, to be seen also in big street-corner hoardings depicting revolutionary denunciation of the American Central Intelligence Agency.

In morning and evening sessions, official news and revolutionary commentaries are broadcast over street loudspeakers.

The music relayed into the foyer and bar of Vientiane's best hotel, the Lane Xang, is Lao patriotic folksongs replacing the diet of somewhat outdated Western pop of a few months ago.

Some young people still sport Western dress, though the girls generally eschew jeans for the national dress, called the sing, an elegant calf-length wraparound skirt that is both attractive and approved.

Hundreds of young people regarded as "socially undesirable" are having their ideas put in line at resident seminars in segregated male and female camps on islands in the Nam Ngum River near here, following roundups which started last April.

Saffron-robed Buddhist monks go about their daily business without hindrance. Many of them have attended seminars, like most Laotians.

For the small Western community in Vientiane, mostly diplomats, life is quiet.

Sunday may mean a day by Vientiane's newest recreational facility, a $320,000 Australian Embassy club on the banks of the Mekong River, boasting a fine swimming pool and a squash court.

Water skiing on the Mekong is no longer a popular activity among foreigners since an Australian diplomat was wounded when Pathet Lao soldiers on the bank opened fire while he was skiing near here a few months ago.

Tourism, banned for several months while the government sorts out details of hotel accommodation and trains guides, may start next year, Sisana said.

Local residents expect tours to include a few days in Vientiane and a few days in Luang Prabang, the former royal capital some 125 miles north.

With official delegations and visiting cultural troupes, the Lane Xang remains pretty full, though private hotels in town are feeling the pinch.

The foreign visitor can still eat at Chinese, Vietnamese and one or two French restaurants, though the choice of dishes is limited and most of the wine has gone, along with Vientiane's once-fabled nightlife.

Nuclear Age Police State Feared in U.K.

LONDON (Reuter) — Environmentalist and civil liberties groups have published a chilling little booklet designed to frighten Britain out of the nuclear age.

Nuclear Prospects: A Comment on the Individual, the State and Nuclear Power was brought out by Friends of the Earth, the Council for the Protection of Rural England and the National Council for Civil Liberties.

It conjectures some civil and political side-effects of a commitment by Britain and, by implication, other democracies to dependence on nuclear energy as a main source of power.

The Atomic Energy Authority (AEA) dismissed the work as "a typical doomsday publication," but newspapers and scientific journals have taken it seriously and generally praised its widening of a nuclear debate now raging here.

The first section of Nuclear Prospects postulates an unspecified "reference year" in which there are 100 nuclear reactors operating in Britain, about half of them "fast breeders" which use plutonium, the raw ingredient of the atomic bomb, as fuel.

Britain now has no commercial fast breeders and the debate is over whether it should build its first one.

Four or five shipments of plutonium would be required daily throughout the country to keep these 100 reactors going. These shipments, and the reactors themselves, would be liable to attacks and hijacking by terrorists.

The booklet proceeds to discuss, in great detail, the sort of security system that would be needed to cope with the situation.

Phones would be tapped; pressure groups, environmentalist and political, would be infiltrated; mail would be opened; large "private" police forces would be required and "broadbrush" counter-terrorist legislation would be passed, the booklet predicts.

What keeps these predictions out of the realm of pure science fiction is that the author of the booklet based their forecasts on recent government statements and action.

British police do not normally carry guns, but the 1976 Atomic Energy Authority (Special Constables) Act allows the AEA's special constabulary to carry guns, engage in hot pursuit and arrest on suspicion. There now are about 400 such constables.

The authors, Dr. Michael Flood of Friends of the Earth and Robin Grove-White of the Council for the Protection of Rural England, estimate this force will grow to 5,000 men by their reference year.

Plutonium is already moved in Britain, and it is illegal to publish information on such movements. No questions on this subject are answered in Parliament.

The authors imagine a situation in which about 18 pounds of plutonium, enough to make an atomic bomb, is known to be missing and a terrorist group claims it has been converted into a bomb and planted in a large city. Properly sealed, the plutonium could not be located from the street by geiger counter.

Such a blast could devastate an area of 70 acres, and the authors feel that under such a threat the normal rules of police search would be dropped.

They note that there is suspicion such rules are dropped routinely after bombings by the Irish Republican Army.

The blast from such a bomb could kill 2,000 to 50,000 people. Parliament passed the Prevention of Terrorism Act, granting police powers to detain suspects without explanation or trial for limited periods, within a few days of the 1973 Birmingham pub bombings, which involved only a score of casualties.

The second half of the pamphlet conjectures growing public opposition to the building of nuclear sites, leading to disruptive action and civil disobedience, and the harsher and harsher actions a government committed to nuclear energy would have to take to deal with this.

The AEA criticized the booklet for "exaggerating out of all recognition the problems of nuclear power and totally ignoring the much worse social consequences which could arise from the energy famine which might occur in the absence of nuclear power."

However, The Times said in a editorial, "The considerations . . . are validly raised. These are factors that ought to be taken into account in debating the nuclear program."

The scientific journal Nature found that the work "begins to fill a widening hole in the debate."

Recently a royal commission on environmental pollution, under the chairmanship of nuclear physicist Sir Brian Flowers, recommended that Britain delay for as long as possible a commitment to nuclear power.

Nuclear Prospects quotes Sir Brian as saying "I do not believe it is a question of whether someone will deliberately acquire (plutonium) for purposes of terror or blackmail, but only of when and how often."

New Alberta Laws Irk Chiropractors

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's chiropractors have begun a fight against new laws they say are discriminatory to their profession.

Dr. L. F. Schnell of Calgary, president of the Alberta Chiropractic Association, said in an interview the association has been concerned about increasingly restrictive regulations.

"The future of our profession is very doubtful in this province," he said.

The Medical Profession Act, passed last June, specifies that it is unethical for a registered medical practitioner to associate directly or indirectly in his pactice with any person who is not a registered practitioner, which includes chiropractors.

Dr. Schnell said private and tax-supported provincial laboratories are not allowed to accept patients of chiropractors referred for specialized x-rays, blood and urine analyses.

The denial of services is based on the false premise that chiropractors are not trained to interpret the results of such testing properly, he said.

Dr. Schnell said that premise is "pure medical chauvinism", since chiropractors' training includes diagnosis, which is often taught by medical doctors using medical textbooks.

"We have a legal, moral and ethical obligation to diagnose the patient before treating him. For years we were criticized by the medical profession for not diagnosing people—now they won't let us do so."

Dr. L. H. le Riche, registrar of the Alberta College of Physicians and Surgeons, said that although the college believes there is a place for manipulative medicine in the treatment of muscular skeletal pain, "we cannot accept that chiropractic can treat disease whereby the diagnosis is based on laboratory findings."

Dr. Schnell said medical college restrictions have also resulted in changes in other areas. Chiropractic services are no longer covered by automobile insurance, he said, although "for years we were able to look after accident victims, like those with whiplash, and it was covered."

CZ $125M Plan 'Act of Faith'

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. chairman Robert Rogers today announced a $125 million spending program as "an act of faith" in the future of British Columbia.

The two-year program — the largest in the company's history — includes $75 million for expansion and $50 million for an accelerated maintenance schedule.

Rogers said funds must be spent if the company is to protect and expand jobs in the province and despite the present weak market conditions.

A large portion of the expansion will take place on Vancouver island.

The major items:

—There will be a $26.6 million addition to the Elk Falls pulp and paper mill complex at Campbell River to increase production of thermomechanical pulp. In addition, $1.5 million will be spent for newsprint machine equipment at the mill.

—An additional $17.8 million will be spent to construct a high-speed, small log sawmill and planer mill at Elk Falls to replace the present one which is obsolete.

—A total of $8.4 million will be spent to impove log sorting and log transportation on Vancouver Island and other coastal operations. The figure includes $2.5 million for a new tug.

—The company will construct a $16.3 million plywood veneer plant and will improve the existing plywood plant at the Fraser Mills wood products complex in Coquitlam.

—In the Interior, $775,000 will be spent for a new production machinery at the company's Armstrong sawmill and plywood mill.

Work will start on all projects in 1977 and should be completed by late 1978.

In addition, the company will spend a further $50 million over the next two years in an accelerated maintenance program. Normally, about $15 million to $20 million per year is the limit of maintenance spending.

Rogers said the program will be financed throuoh internally-generated funds in the early stages with some borrowing later in the program.

Rogers said the program would not result in any immediate increase in jobs (except for construction) but production would be expanded.

Company production of baled pulp will rise to an average of 570 tons from 530 tons. Newsprint production will rise to 750 tons per day from 700 tons.

Lumber production at Campbell River will rise to 100 million board feet from 70 million. Plywood production at Fraser Mills will be increased to 125 million square feet from 100 million.

In addition, 110 million square feet of new plywood production will be added at Fraser Mills.

The company will be spending $4 million to improve air quality standards at the Elk Falls mill.

Rogers said there will be a reduction of water debris by the new program of transporting logs by barge rather than in rafts. Crown Zellerbach would be the first company to change to a system of moving all logs by barge, he said.

Last expansion program by the company was $25 milllion in spending which was completed in 1974.

Fishing Union Probe Called Off by Gov't

VANCOUVER (CP) — An anti-combines investigation into the affairs of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union has been cancelled indefinitely, Frank Roseman, restrictive trades practices commissioner, announced today.

The decision follows two days of demonstrations and disruptions by fishermen of the hearings attempting to be held by the investigators.

Fishermen refused orders from the investigators to be examined in private. Monday a crowd of them jammed an office in the downtown MacMillan Bloedel building, forcing Roseman to abandon the hearing.

Tuesday a group of about 15 fishermen entered the consumer and corporate affairs office in the Pacific Centre where the investigation had been transferred and scuffles broke out with staff members trying to keep them out of the hearing room.

Again the hearings were postponed.

Roseman said today he didn't know if they would be resumed but he said it couldn't "be concluded that they will be dropped."

The decision to abandon the proceedings came from Robert Bertrand of Ottawa, the director of investigations and research with the restricted trades practices commission.

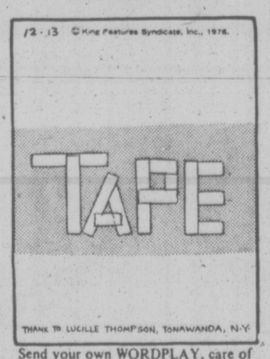

Fishermen who thronged the abortive hearings protested that the hearings should be held in public.

George Hewison, UFAWU business agent, said the federal government was conducting "star chamber" hearing into the union's business and said the fishermen had nothing to hide.

The union's offices were raided in November, 1975, and thousands of documents were

Iona Threatens To Quit Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP)—Sport Minister Iona Campagnolo said Tuesday she is prepared to resign her cabinet seat if ferry service in northern B.C. is not improved.

However, she expressed confidence in an interview that Transport Minister Otto Lang appreciates the difficulties facing northern British Columbians and b etter service will be provided.

Mrs. Campagnolo said she told a meeting in her hometown of Prince Rupert that if she was unable to "bring the seriousness of the situation facing my consitutents to the attention of the government," then she had no "real recourse but to resign."

Mrs. Campagnolo's threat to resign was mentioned in the Commons Tuesday by Benno Friesen (PC—Surrey-White Rock) as he was questioning Lang.

Lang said that Friesen was overstating the case.

PRICES UP ONLY 5.6%

Rate of Inflation At Four-Year Low

OTTAWA (CP) — Lower food prices in November produced the smallest annual increase in the cost of living in nearly four years, Statistics Canada said today.

The consumer price index—the most widely used measure of inflation—rose only 5.6 per cent in the 12 months to November. The last time there was a smaller annual increase for the monthly index was in December, 1972, when it rose by 5.1 per cent.

Statistics Canada said the continuing moderation in consumer prices last month once again was entirely attributable to food prices. Excluding food, the index rose at an annual rate of 8.6 per cent.

Pork prices were down on average by nine per cent in November from October levels, and fresh fruit prices also declined. These were only partly offset by higher prices for fresh vegetables, milk, soft drinks and restaurant meals.

In a review of the economy presented Tuesday to provincial finance ministers, federal Finance Minister Donald Macdonald conceded that the slowing of the inflation rate this year has been due almost entirely to food prices. He warned that Canadians cannot expect to continue benefitting from lower food prices.

Macdonald warned that primary producers of food, who are not subject to price controls, now need higher prices in order to assure a steady supply.

He predicted "a probable turnaround" in food prices together with a new round of oil price increases and the impact of a devalued Canadian dollar will all contribute to higher inflation in the months ahead.

The result will be mixed pattern of acceleration and deceleration in the rate of increase for consumer prices over the next few months, he said.

Despite the generally lower inflation rate last month, the purchasing power of the dollar remains weak. A 1971 dollar was worth only 66 cents in November.

The over-all index in November stood at 152.2, up from 151.7 in October. On a 1971 base of 100, the index was at 14.1 in November, 1975.

PENSIONS UP 8.2% JAN. 1

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada Pension Plan retirement, disability and survivors' benefits will rise by 8.2 per cent Jan. 1, the health and welfare department announced today.

The increases mean that retirement benefits will go to a maximum of $173.61 a month and disability benefits will rise to a maximum $175.05 monthly.

Maximum surviving spouses' benefits will go to $104.17 a month for those 65 and older and $109.94 for those under 65.

Benefits to children of disabled contributors and orphans of deceased contributors will go to a maximum $44.84 a month.

Quake Topples Building

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A mild earthquake rocked a gold mining town southwest of here today killing at least one miner and bringing a four-storey block of apartments crashing to the ground.

The tremor at Welkom, 175 miles southwest of Johannesburg, lasted nearly two minutes, according to witnesses, and measured 4.8 on the open ended Richter Scale which classified it as mild.

Gold mine elevators were jammed in shafts and scores of windows shattered onto cracked sidewalks. Civic officials feared more deaths would be reported as rubble clearing proceeded.

"Suddenly the ground was moving violently, cars were bouncing around and people rushed into the streets to escape falling plaster and walls," one office worker said. "Many people were trapped inside because doors would not open."

"Theres just rubble," said Mrs. Colleen Futter, manager of a local air charter company, after she drove past the destroyed Tempest HOF block of apartments. The building disintegrated about two hours after the tremor.

"There were masses of people around, earth moving equipment, police and ambulances," said Mrs. Futter.

The quake occurred at 10:38 a.m. government geological survey officials said in Pretoria.

Telephone communications to the dusty but neatly laid out town, which is South Africa's biggest gold source, were partially cut.

AVIS PAYOFFS DENIED BY LANG

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang said Tuesday he is confident no one in his department accepted improper payments from the Avis car rental agency.

And he accused Conservative transport critic Jack Horner (Crowfoot) of making "totally unfair" statements in suggesting that he or his officials might have taken such payments.

Horner told the Commons that Avis auditors recently found that the company paid $425,000 since Jan. 1, 1972, to "consultants, local government officials and others."

He asked the transport minister whether any of the $425,000 "found its way into his department or to himself."

Lang replied: "I know of no such matters and am confident none have occurred."

Later, Horner told reporters that he felt it was his duty to raise the issue in case it was related to a recent controversy over car rental locations at Canadian airports.

He said he learned of the payments from an American newspaper clipping sent to him anonymously.

UVic Wing Gets Go-Ahead

The music wing at the University of Victoria has been given the go-ahead after all.

Reversing an earlier decision not to approve funds for the facility, the Universities Council of B.C. has written to Education Minister Pat McGeer recommending the wing be given top priority.

Funds for the $3.2 million extension to the MacLaurin building will be borrowed through the B.C. Education Capital Financing Authority subject to McGeer's approval.

UCBC financial adviser Ted Affleck said he is not certain what the current borrowing power was, so he could not hazard a guess when construction would begin.

"But it's been designated top priority," he said today.

In early October, the UCBC announced the construction grant disbursements for B.C.'s three universities, and the music wing was not included although it had at one time been approved by the provincial government.

UVic president Howard Petch, board of governors chairman Joe Cunliffe and board member Ian Stewart made a personal appeal to the council in Vancouver Nov. 16, asking it to reconsider the decision.

The council wrote to McGeer Monday recommending approval.

Caron Quit On His Own

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Press reported erroneously in various news stories Nov. 23, 24 and 25 that H. Marcel Caron of Montreal had been dropped or removed as a director of the Crown corporation, Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd.

In fact, Caron resigned as a director on his own volition in September, 1976.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie told the Commons committee on natural resources and public works Nov. 24 that Caron had come to him "on his own volition" to report concern "not about a conflict of interest, but . . . the appearance of a conflict of interest" because Caron's firm of Clarkson, Gordon and Co. Ltd. was the auditor of customers of AECL.

The Canadian Press regrets its error and apologizes for any embarrassment or inconvenience caused Caron.

ALL DOLLED UP ON WAY TO WORK

BOSTON (UPI) — State policeman Frank Baran said the blonde with the turned-up nose was "a real doll."

Baran became suspicious Tuesday because the blonde he saw every morning riding in a car with two men had been wearing the same clothes for a month. "Besides, she never smiled," he said.

The trooper pulled the car over and discovered the blonde was a mannequin. The driver got a summons for failure to obey a highway sign restricting morning travel in the commuter lane of Interstate 93 to cars with three or more passengers.

YOUNGSTER receives care in a Lesotho hospital. He is wearing a nightgown made by a USC volunteer in Canada. Patterns are available from the USC, 56 Sparks St., Ottawa.

A Place in Her Heart

It's inevitable that as someone with the compassion of Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova travels around the world, some poverty-stricken countries become especially dear to her.

To the executive director of the Unitarian Services Committee, Lesotho is one such country.

Lesotho is one of those emerging black African countries that few Westerners appear to know anything about.

But Dr. Lotta does — especially its hungry children — in particular, th eherd boys.

They have very little future, unless they can be educated, and Dr. Lotta has organized a USC scholarship fund — one of the most successful contributions to Lesotho.

A constribution from you may go to a young herd boy's schooling or another important USC project in Lesotho.

During her most recent visit to that country, Dr. Lotta made notes on her observa-in particular, the herd boys.

"Often they are tiny boys, clad in a torn blanket with little else to protect them from the driving winds and the snow in wintertime. Their stomachs are bloated from undernourishment and worms."

Most children attend school only every second or third day or don't even enter primary school until their teens because of their duties.

One scholarship recipient is Stephen Sefako. Stephen did not enter primary school until he was 16. Now 22, Stephen is in his second to last year of high school and leading his class.

Thanks to USC, his schooling is assured, and he wants to continue on to study medicine. Doctors are badly needed in Lesotho.

The USC scholarship fund costs $200 per student. The Lesotho government underwrites all university costs provided the student has earned a first or second class pass.

Dr. Lotta says she is confident all her students will qualify for that privilege.

The people of Greater Victoria last year donated $23,920 to the local USC appeal sponsored by The Times.

This year, the goal is $30,000 and contributions can be mailed in care of he Victoria Times, P.O. Box 300, Victoria, brought to the business office counter at 2621 Douglas or will be accepted by any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Cheques should be made payable to the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

Blind 51 Years, He Reads Electronically

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Erol Hembroff, 56, doesn't like reading newspapers. He gets too dirty, particularly when what he reads makes him scratch his head.

Erol, blind since the age of five, literally reads with his hands, and a $5,000 portable marvel called an Optacon (optical to tactile converter).

"I have nothing against newspapers," Hembroff said, "but they have their disadvantages."

For example, the text on a page of newsprint is arranged irregularly, broken up by headlines, photographs and columns of advertisements that are supposed to be laid out for eye appeal.

Eye appeal Hembroff doesn't need. He has no recollection of sight and even his dreams are non-visual.

So when he sits down to scan a page of newsprint with his Optacon he never knows when he will run off the news type and into an ad, losing his place and perhaps the gist of what he was reading.

Meanwhile, his fingers have been running back and forth picking up ink, and when he scratches his head . . .

The third complaint about newspapers is the style of typeface with its open "a", the "i" that sometimes appears as a "t" and the 'h" that often looks like an 'n".

A small "a", to Hembroff sometimes appears as a "Q", and to him that single letter of the alphabet is subject to the most variation.

"But I'm getting used to your language," he smiles.

The heart of the Optacon is a curious substance that responds to electronic stimuli like Pavlov's dog.

Signals are generated when a small, hand-held scanning camera is passed over type characters. Two tiny electric lights illuminate the character and its shape is recognized by 18 photoelectric cells which pass electronic impulses along to a power pack Hembroff can sling over his shoulder.

In the power pack the minute signal is amplified and passed on to a pizo crystal, a substance that responds mechanically, in a knee-jerk reaction that sets an arrangement of tiny pins in motion like a massage vibrator, or a bank of solenoids.

Hembroff holds his left index finger over the miniature console of pins and senses the shape of each letter as the pizo crystal taps them out.

Optacon perceives only one letter at a time, so it takes a long while for a person to develop speed. "It reduces you to digital reading," Hembroff said.

His machine was the first one in Canada and only the 50th one manufactured from a California invention. There are now three others in Victoria and the price has dropped to $3,000.

But even so, few blind people can afford one. Hembroff, being fully employed, managed it on his own.

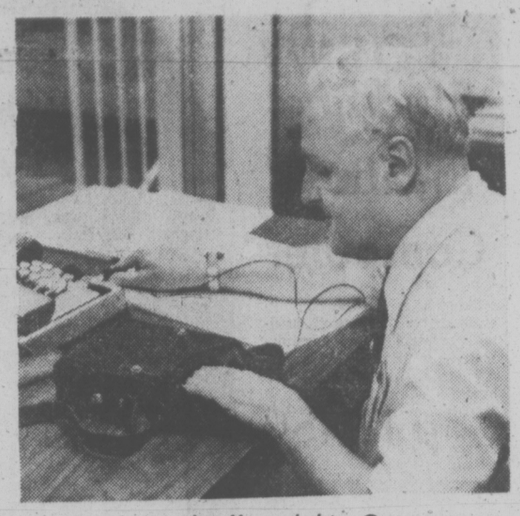

Later development in the field — spurred by the thousands of blind veterans returning from Vietnam — has produced a $50,000 device called a Kerzwell that gives an overview of typescript, transmitting whole words and phrases at a time.

The U.S. Veterans' Administration, more charitable than the Canadian government — pays for such things.

Meanhile, Hembroff continues practising and improving his efficiency, and cares for his left index finger like a concert pianist favors his hands. If anything happened to it, Hembroff would have to submit another digit to "biological retraining" to achieve the required sensitivity.

Hembroff has been reading the printed word only four years. His first "language" is braille, which he has used most of his life, and his second tongue is the cabalistic lingo of computers.

In his job as a program analyst for the department of transport and communications, Hembroff has managed to marry all three forms into effective, well-rounded communication despite his handicap.

Erol Hembroff and his Optacon

Church Justice Queried

Allowing women to be ordained priests in the Anglican Church is a question of justice, a former editor of the church's magazine Canadian Churchman said today.

Hugh McCullum said in an interview the Anglican Church supports the rights of native people as a matter of justice and should be willing to grant women their rights.

"There is a far more compelling case for justice in the bible than there is for not ordaining women," he said.

McCullum stressed he is not in Victoria to engage in a fight with the Very Rev. Brian Whitlow, dean and rector of Victoria's Christ Church Cathedral.

Whitlow gave his parishioners a letter Sunday in which he expressed strong opposition to the ordination last week of five woman priests in the Anglican Church.

McCullum is in Victoria to speak on the necessity of not allowing any major developments in the northern part of Canada until native land claims are settled.

McCullum was editor of the Canadian Churchman from 1968 to 1975 and during that period contributed to a book published in 1975, on the pros and cons of women priests.

He said today he doesn't understand what all the current fuss is about and suggests that it is a small but vocal minority which is opposed to ordaining women.

A conference of Anglican bishops in 1968 and meetings of all independent Anglican Church representatives concluded that there is no compelling theological reason why women should not be priests.

He said the main arguments against women priests are that such ordinations would violate church tradition and create a schism between the Roman Catholic and Greek Orthodox churches.

Most people feel that because the Roman Catholic Church doesn't ordain women it is not a compelling enough reason to deny that right to women in the Anglican Church, he said.

He said there is a strong movement within the Roman Catholic Church to have female priests but because it is more of a monolithic structure than the Anglican Church, it is taking longer to come about.

More Security Urged As Escapers Hunted

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The director of corrections for Vancouver Island called today for more staff or electronic surveillance equipment to prevent further breakouts from Wilkinson Road jail.

Hal McGillivray suggested the extra staff and equipment be used until a promised new maximum security facility is built.

His call came after two "potentially dangerous" inmates broke out of the west wing of the 63-year-old prison Tuesday night.

Saanich police identified the escapers as Dennis Matthew Wilson, 23 and Thomas Russell Totten, 26.

McGillivray said the pair pried open a bar over a window in the dayroom of the cell block, tore off wire mesh, smashed a pane of glass and jumped six feet to the ground.

A guard heard the glass breaking and raced into the dayroom just as the second man was wiggling his way through the hole in the window.

The escapers crossed a courtyard, scaled a 10-foot fence and barbed wide, then fled across a field to the perimeter of the prison grounds and freedom.

Guards alerted to the breakout saw the men fleeing down a road near Cherry and Wilkinson.

McGillivray said Wilson and Totten apparently cut a bar from a cell in their tier, then used it as a lever to pry away a window bar embedded in cement that had become soft and crumbling with age.

He said the pair wrapped a blanket around their hands before punching out the glass pane.

The escape was reported to Saanich police at 6:45 p.m. and within five minutes five police cruisers and six corrections staff cars began a search centred in the Panama Flats area.

An RCMP tracking dog was brought from Nanaimo but because of the rain failed to pick up a scent.

McGillivray said there were 18 other inmates in the west wing section where Wilson and Totten were held.

There were 20 more in another section of the west wing and 41 others in the east wing. None attempted to follow the escapers.

Both men were serving sentences and awaiting trial on other matters. McGillivray said Totten was a parole violator and Wilson was serving a six months sentence for conviction last month of unlawful confinement stemming from an abortive jailbreak from Wilkinson Road jail last February. He was also serving two years less a day for a sexual offense.

The escape was the first since 10 men broke out of the west wing last Dec. 16.

The capacity of the institution has been set at 60 inmates but deputy director Harry Bacon said it is not unusual at times to have as many as 115 prisoners.

"If we can't get more staff then closed-circuit TV monitoring the day rooms would alleviate the need," he said.

Mistrial Declared

A mistrial as declared Tuesday in the seventh day of the trial of a 34-year-old Victoria man accused of murder.

Mr. Justice Victor Dryer made the ruling in B.C. Supreme Court, and said the new trial will be held in January in Nanaimo.

Ross was accused of murder punishable by life imprisonment in the death "on or about Nov. 1, 1975" of Malcolm Preston Cunningham.

Cunningham was found dead near the CP Railway tracks and Humpback Road south of Goldstream Park Dec. 2, 1975.

The assize jury heard from 15 witnesses and was in the midst of cross-examination of Crown witness Gordon Anthony Caldell.

The defence motion for a mistrial was based on certain testimony given by Caldwell.

Mr. Justiee Dryer told the jury, after hearing legal argument in their absence, that "something took place" which resulted in a defence motion for a mistrial and he had granted the motion.

The next sitting of the assizes in Nanaimo begins Jan. 4 but the date for Ross' new trial will be set later.

The Crown's case was presented by George MacMinn, assisted by Nicholas Lang. Ross was represented by Dermod Owen-Flood, assisted by Robert Higinbotham.

New Laws Considered To End Beach Uproar

Saanich council is considering new bylaws to crack down on beach-partying hooligans.

The council's parks and recreation committee Tuesday instructed parks administrator Frank Andrews to ask the police department how many beaches are plagued with rowdyism.

Municipal solicitor Doug Patterson will make recommendations on the feasibility of a bylaw to enforce restrictions.

The action was taken after a delegation of Arbutus Road residents asked council to erect a gate at Arbutus Cove to stop night visitors.

They told of wild parties, drunken minors, fires left burning near bushes, damage to private property and excessive noise that went on into the early hours.

In a 24-signature petition, they complained, "Our rights as residents and taxpayers are being denied us in favor of hoodlums and hooligans".

Duncan Smith of 4241 Gordon Head Road, who walks the beach each morning, said, "I've picked up more than 100 dozen beer bottles between April and October and at least 50 dozen more broken beer bottles . . . I don't want to be a garbage man."

A. R. H. Butler, 2208 Arbutus, reported fires had been lit near the "fancy wooden steps" built by Saanich and parts of the steps had been used for burning.

"I'm worried about the teeny-boppers. I've seen 13-year-olds with 21-year-old toughies. There's a lot of minor drinking going on. They should be protected from themselves."

He said the police seemed powerless to do other than shoo off the revellers. The fire department, too, had been unable to do anything. He and the other residents disagreed with a police department report that inferred the problem was not serious.

They were backed by Ald. Maurice Johnson who said, "The reports of the police are usually filled with inaccuracies. May be it's because we don't have enough police, bylaws . . . or guts, I'm not sure."

Mayor Ed Lum told the residents restrictions would have to apply to every public beach in Saanich and he knew of at least one other area, Sayward Beach, that is also posing problems.

Lum explained the Municipal Act requires public accesses to beaches every 600 feet and if Arbutus is closed another will have to be built close by.

Norman Guild, 2210 Arbutus, said its not an isolated problem.

"There are problems at every beach from Cadboro Bay to Cordova Bay," he said, "We're asking you to come up with a solution because Saanich has a problem. The police report is a complete misrepresentation of the facts."

Guild said he agreed with a suggestion by the police that a curfew might help solve the problem.

Council's traffic committee will also be asked to rule on whether parking of cars near the access and on the ocean side of the road should be banned.

PUB PITCH IN TROUBLE

The developer of a business block at Cedar Hill Road and McKenzie Avenue said today he doesn't want a neighborhood pub as a tenant.

Paul Grieve of Aske Construction said Bruce Wiechert was incorrect Monday when he told Saanich council the pub proposal has received approval from his company.

"He (Wiechert) had a short conversation on the phone with my agent but there were no promises of any kind," Grieve said, "I've written the planning department stating the proposal was purely speculative."

Mobile Home Firm Must Pay

Goldstream Mobile Homes Ltd. of Victoria has been ordered by the small claims court to return $1,000 a consumer paid to the company so mobile home could remain in a park.

The customer originally paid $1,145 as a commission to the mobile home company and recovered $1,000 of that in small claims court.

The provincial consumer and corporate affairs ministry, in its enforcement reports released Tuesday, said a frequent complaint against operators of mobile home parks is that landlords often demand some payment or commission from the sale of a mobile home so that the home can stay in the park.

The report said the customer was advised to take the company to small claims court.

The limit of recovery action in small claims court is $1,000.

The enforcement report also revealed that March 10 has been set as the court date for hearing on a charge by the consumer ministry against Traders Home Furnishing and Appliances of Victoria.

The ministry has charged that Trader failed to give equal prominence in newspaper and radio advertisements to the total price of goods advertised, which is a breach of the Trade Practices Act.

Road Death Witnesses Sought

An inquest will open later this week in the death of Mrs. Georgina Mary Smith, 95, of 4021 Saanich Road, who died after being hit by a car at McKenzie and Saanich Tuesday.

Saanich police said the woman and her brother Robert Velge, 93, were walking south across McKenzie when a car driven by Rey Alexander Carr, 35, of 5962 Blythswood Road collided with them.

Mrs. Smith died a few hours later in Royal Jubilee Hospital. Velge is in fair condition.

Saanich police have appealed for witnesses to the accident to contact the department at 388-4321.

Police are anxious to talk to the driver of a black Chrysler which was travelling south on Saanich Road just before the mishap. The car apparently had two radio aerials.

Fanning the Independence Embers

It is better to light a candle than to sit and curse the darkness.

So says Doug Christie and the Victoria lawyer has sparked the flicker that he hopes will flare up into a fire of reason hot enough to lead Western Canada out of the darkness that is Confederation.

The 30-year-old Christie is chairman and founder ot the Committee for Western Independence. The Committee was formed in February, 1975, after the hassle over oil rights in Alberta.

"Previously, the province has been regarded as the owner of the natural resource of oil," Christie points out. "Then the world price went above Alberta's price and suddenly it became a federal resource through the export tax which in effect expropriated it and prevented Alberta from exporting it and getting the revenue.

"That was just a blatant example of the power of the federal government to deprive a province of its legitimate fair share," charges Christie.

"They wouldn't have done it if that province was located in Eastern Canada because of their electoral base. If it was Quebec or Ontario MPs to way the federal government would have expropriated the resource the way they did. They'd have to satisfy their Quebec or Ontario MPs tro stay in power and the government couldn't govern without either of those two provices.

Christie

"But they can govern without all the west through the simple fact that the House of Commons has 68 members from Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and B.C. together while Ontario and Quebec have 88 and 74 seats respectively."

Though they have only 27 per cent of Canada's population, says Christie, the four western provinces contribute about 50 per cent of the gross national product. So they are carrying more than their load now.

"The balance of power is never going to shift without independence," he warns.

And so Christie and his committee members are pushing for the four provinces, together with tehe Yukon and the Northwest Territories, to break away and form the new nation of Western Canada.

Present provincial boundaries would be done away with, a new capital city would be created in a central location, all the duplications in the various departments under the federal-provincial system would be eliminated and the regionally-representative government would be much closer to the wishes of the people, promises Christie.

"We're finding that today, people are pretty fed up with the federal scene," he says. "Ottawa doesn't represent the wishes of Western Canadians."

"Trudeau talking about national unity to me is about as sincere as he was when he spoke about wage and price controls before the last election. The man to my mind has demonstrated total unreliability and if the unity of Canada depends on politicians such as Pierre Trudeau then certainly from an ethical and moral point of view we'd be better without it. A man who can stand on a balcony of a hotel in Havana at the time when Cubans were slaughtering Africans with Soviet machineguns and tanks and shout 'Viva Fidel' doesn't reflect the wishes of Western Canadians. National unity from a man like him is like the wolf preaching good behavior to the sheep!"

Trudeau's bilingualism stand has hurt Western Canada and, says Christie, practically speaking it's impossible for Canada to be a bilingual nation.

The country under Joe Clark wouldn't be much better, he says.

"If ever there was a demonstration of 'Me Too-ism' it would have to be the position Joe Clark takes on almost every issue. He has to say the same things as Trudeau because he's got to appeal to the same Ontario and Quebec voters."

And so, insists the lawyer, the only way out is independence. But doesn't he, in proposing such a breakup, feel just a trifle un-Canadian?

"No! Personally, I think I am more true to the reflection of what the basic rights of Canadians are than is the government of Canada. The constant erosion of the British tradition of respect for Parliament to my mind is more un-Canadian than any effort that I might make to re-institute it in Western Canada."

A new nation of Western Canada would have all the natural resources it needed to survive economically and it would be up to the new government to guard these resources like a sacred trust and not let them be exploited for the affluence of one generation, says Christie.

It will come, he insists, in time, and will be achieved through a buildup in membership from the present 2,000 or so mark to around 50,000 and then through a series of provincial plebiscites.

Christie says the issue of patriotism is the only criticism of their position.

"In the face of an emotional attachment to an abstract concept of Canada, there's nothing we can say," he concedes.

"And it is a very abstract concept. It has nothing to do with the government because the government doesn't reflect Western Canada. It has nothing to do with economics because Western Canada doesn't benefit economically from Confederation. And it has nothing to do with social or linguistic values because the government of Canada doesn't reflect our values. So it has to be abstract. You can't point to any area where Western Canada benefits from Confederation.

"I've heard lots of people say 'Oh, you're trying to break up this country!' Well, that reminds me of the joke where the dissolute husband destroys the family resources by drinking, and beats up his wife and children . . . and when she asks him for a divorce he's irate because she threatens to break up the marriage!"
